

County expected to end odd-even plan

By NOEL SWANN
Our L.A. Bureau

The odd-even gasoline marketing plan in Los Angeles County is expected to end sometime next week, if supervisors go along with a move to call off the emergency under which the plan was started.

Supervisor James Hayes, chairman of the Board's energy commission, said Friday he will ask his colleagues to abandon the odd-even plan at Tuesday's meeting, adding that he expects a unanimous vote on the move. If the motion is approved, Hayes said possibly Gov. Reagan could act by Wednesday to declare the emergency over.

Hayes, only a few days ago won board support for continuing the odd-even plan, saying shortages could be expected through mid-May in spite of the lifting of the Arab oil boycott. However, he said Friday that "new information" has been received on fuel availability allowing for the plan to be dropped.

"It now appears increased allocations are flowing on a regular basis into Los Angeles County," Hayes said.

"However, I urge motorists not to return to panic buying, especially the practice of topping off gas tanks as this could easily plunge the county back into the chaos that existed before the odd-even plan began March 1."

Noting that there still could be "some fluctuations" in supplies, Hayes said there may still be some inconvenience to motorists when the plan is dropped. But, he said this should be minimal if persons continue to drive at lower speeds and save fuel by not taking unnecessary trips.

Scrapping of the plan will hit about 12,000 motorists who in the last few weeks paid $5 each for "C" stickers enabling them to get gas any day of the week because they use their cars for business.

Originally, the county estimated there would be 250,000 applications for the stickers, but the demand fell far short of this, mainly because of the requirement that motorists had to average more than 100 miles a day on business to obtain the stickers.

Hayes said a check will be made of the county's administrative costs for the "C" sticker program. If less than $5 per application, a partial refund would be made to the motorists who applied for the decals, he said.

Hayes also noted that Shell Oil Co. now is supplying 102 per cent of the base needs for the county's vehicle fleet during April. He said it appears this increased allocation will continue through May.

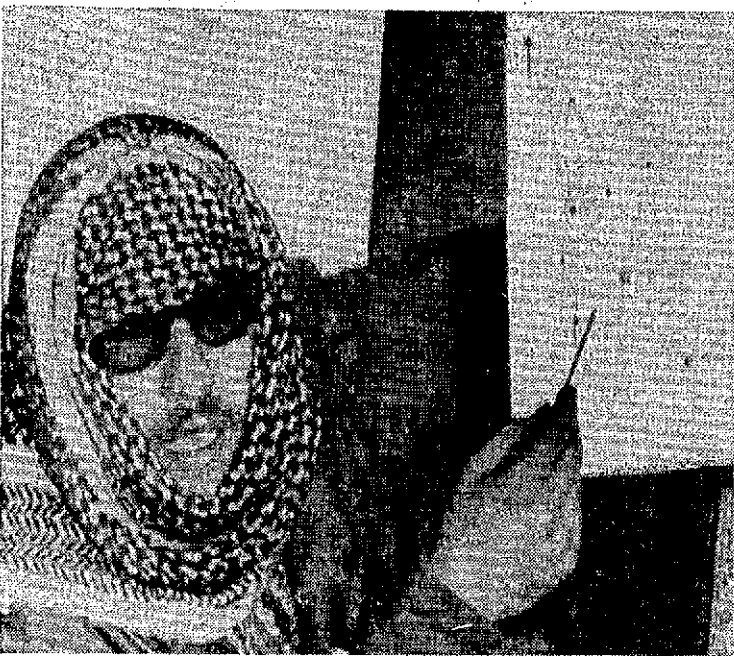

In March, Shell was required to cut the county's allocation by 40 per cent but much of the deficit was made up after the state called on Shell to supply gasoline from emergency set-aside supplies.

Israelis raid Lebanon villages in retaliation for massacre

United Press International

Israeli forces raided six border villages inside Lebanon early today and blew up houses in retaliation for an Arab guerrilla attack that killed 18 Israelis in the northern settlement of Qiryat Shmonah.

The Israeli military command said its troops suffered no casualties in the attacks. It said the Lebanese buildings were ordered evacuated before the assaults "to avoid hurting their inhabitants."

An army spokesman said the raid "close to the cease-fire line in southern Lebanon, followed up the massacre of residents of Qiryat Shmonah by Arab terrorists" on Thursday.

The army spokesman said the operation "was intended to strike villages whose residents are aiding the terrorists."

He said during the raid "there was no resistance by the Lebanese army, which had left the area."

The spokesman said the Israeli raiders struck the villages of Taibe, Mhaibeh, Blida, Aitarun, Yaron and Sahera.

All the villages border on the northern panhandle of Israel, where the town of Qiryat Shmonah is flanked by Israeli-occupied Golan Heights on the east and Lebanon on the west.

It was the first Israeli raid on Lebanese territory since April 1973, when Israeli commandos, in a lightning strike, attacked Arab guerrilla offices in Beirut and killed three guerrilla leaders.

Prime Minister Golda Meir had warned after the Arab guerrilla attack, "The Lebanese government must know that we regard it and its citizens responsible for the massacre."

In Beirut, the possibility of an Israeli reprisal raid Friday prompted Lebanese Premier Takiyeddin Solh to call in ambassadors from the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union to discuss the situation.

At the United Nations, Lebanon officially denied Friday that the attack on Qiryat Shmonah was launched from Lebanese territory.

Lebanese Ambassador Edouard Ghorra said U.N. truce observers on the border between Israel and Lebanon have not offered any evidence to support the charge that guerrillas crossed the frontier.

A Beirut spokesman for the maverick Palestinian group that attacked the northern Israeli settlement pledged further raids in an effort to sabotage a Middle East peace settlement.

Grieving and angry residents of Qiryat Shmona buried 16 of their relatives and neighbors Friday in a hilltop cemetery overlooking the apartment bloc where the guerrillas carried out the attack.

Two other persons, a soldier and a border policeman, killed in Thursday's assault were buried in their hometowns of Ramat Hasharon near Tel Aviv and Tarshiha in western Galilee.

The raid was the bloodiest guerrilla attack in Israel since the massacre at Tel Aviv's Lod Airport nearly two years ago. Some 28 persons died in that attack.

Kissinger sees limited accord Sweeping arms ban ruled out

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger virtually ruled out Friday the possibility of a comprehensive strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union this year, but said "a more limited" accord curbing some offensive arms might be signed during President Nixon's expected visit to Moscow in June.

In an impromptu news conference following a two-hour meeting at the White House with President Nixon and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Kissinger said the strategic arms talks were so "complicated" that it was possible that not even the "limited" accord could be achieved by the time Nixon concludes his visit to the Soviet Union.

But Kissinger went out of his way to assert that the problems over conclusion of a new strategic arms accord with the Russians did not mean that the administration's policy of seeking better relations with Moscow was in trouble.

Following the White House meeting, Kissinger, Gromyko and their top aides continued discussions for 2½ hours at the State Department on strategic arms issues, the Middle East, European problems and Soviet-American cooperation.

The general atmosphere was described as "friendly" by Kissinger and both men sought to leave the impression with newsmen that they had been pleased with the talks.

Kissinger, since returning from Moscow two weeks ago, has been concerned about the problem of providing a realistic outlook for the forthcoming summit without appearing so negative as to provoke questions on whether the summit trip by Nixon was justified at this time.

He stressed in reply to impeachment questions at his news conference that Nixon "does not conduct himself as if he were in a position of weakness, nor do foreign leaders treat him as if he were in a position of weakness."

"When we talk about complexities in negotiations in SALT (the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) this does not mean that detente is in any difficulty," he said, "nor does it mean that progress is unreasonably slow."

"It does mean that the subject is difficult, and that the President is determined to deal with it in the confidence that the decisions that are made will affect the security of the United States for a period of time much longer than his term in office, but for decades ahead," he said.

Referring continually to the strategic arms limitation talks in Geneva by their acronym, SALT, Kissinger said that he had already indicated at a news conference last month prior to his recent Moscow trip that "it is unlikely that we can achieve a comprehensive agreement of a permanent nature — certainly by the time of the summit meeting."

"There remains a possibility of a substantial agreement of a more limited sphere," he added, but said this would not be known until after the U.S. makes some new proposal in a few weeks.

Crucifixion rites held under Israeli guns

United Press International

Thousands of Christian pilgrims, under the weary eyes of machine gun-toting Israeli soldiers, watched processions reenacting the crucifixion of Jesus Christ almost 2,000 years ago in the Holy City of Jerusalem Good Friday.

In Rome, Pope Paul VI insisted on carrying a six-foot cross in traditional Roman Catholic Good Friday rites despite a bout with the flu that forced him to cancel another appearance.

In the United States, there was some pageantry and some controversy but most people began celebrating the Easter weekend with simple vacation pastimes. All major financial markets were closed.

On South Padre Island, Texas, several thousand young campers gathered to ride a high surf. Two youths were charged with possession of marijuana and 15 others were charged with pitching a tent in an area barred to campers. Authorities said they expect some 60,000 youngsters in the area by Sunday.

In Boston, abortion advocate Bill Baird scheduled a march with members of the militant feminist National Organization for Women (NOW) to counter a Good Friday procession led by Humberto Medeiros, the Roman Catholic cardinal of the New England area.

Plans for the Easter Bonnet Parade down New York City's Fifth Avenue on Sunday morning went ahead despite a forecast of rain.

Throughout Latin America, Roman Catholics staged colorful processions reenacting the crucifixion and the annual passion play at Ixtapalapa outside Mexico City drew a throng of thousands.

American's condition grave Envoy kidnaped, shot, abandoned

CORDOBA, Argentina (UPI)—Leftist guerrillas kidnaped an American diplomat at his home Friday, but then left him wounded and unconscious alongside a river bed.

The U.S. Embassy in Buenos Aires said Alfred A. Laun III, a 36-year old public information officer, had been found alive with bullet wounds in the stomach and shoulder. He also appeared to have suffered a severe blow to the head, the embassy said.

A bottle of blood plasma was rigged to his body.

Laun was found by police acting on an anonymous telephone tip and was rushed to a clinic in Cordoba, the embassy said.

An embassy spokesman said police told the embassy that Laun's condition was "grave but not hopeless," adding he had recovered consciousness and "it is hoped that his life can be saved."

A Cordoba radio station said it received an anonymous call that led police to the banks of the Rio Primero, a creek running through Cordoba.

There they found Laun wrapped in blankets lying between two trucks on the outskirts of the city.

A note found attached to Laun's clothing described emergency surgery carried out by his captors after he was wounded during the kidnaping.

The tall, bespectacled diplomat was subdued in a struggle punctuated by gunfire and dragged to a waiting car, leaving behind a trail of blood.

The People's Revolutionary Army, an outlawed Marxist group, announced in a statement delivered to news media it had seized Laun "to interrogate him about his counter-revolutionary activities in Vietnam, Santo Domingo, Brazil, Bolivia and for his active participation as liaison in the fascist military coup in the brother nation of Chile."

"He will also be interrogated about his connection with the CIA," the statement said.

"During the operation, Mr. Alfred Laun offered resistance and was wounded. For the time being, he will remain under arrest in a people's jail at the disposition of the revolutionary tribunal," the communique said.

The U.S. embassy said Laun had not held posts in Brazil, Bolivia or Chile, although he did work with USIA in Santo Domingo, Vietnam and Thailand.

An Argentine police spokesman said the kidnaping occurred at 8:30 a.m. when the guerrillas burst into Laun's chalet-style home in a tree-lined residential area of Unquillo—a small town 15 miles from Cordoba, and surprised him at the breakfast table.

"The neighbors told us they heard several shots and saw how the kidnapers dragged Mr. Laun toward one of the cars," the police spokesman said.

Freeway bus hijacked, 42 passengers robbed

By MIKE JELF

A Greyhound bus carrying 43 persons from Los Angeles to San Diego was hijacked Friday night by three men who methodically robbed passengers before forcing the bus driver to let them out in Downey, deputies reported.

The bandits, one of whom was armed with a long-barreled pistol, escaped with an undetermined amount of cash and loot in the area of Lakewood Boulevard and the Santa Ana Freeway after what investigators called a "very slick operation."

The bus left the Los Angeles Greyhound terminal at 8:20 p.m. via the Santa Ana Freeway, said sheriff's robbery investigators, and had passed the Triggs Street crossing in East Los Angeles when a passenger approached the driver.

THE passenger, described as a black man of medium build, in his mid-20s, pulled a handgun from concealment in his clothing and put it to the head of the driver, saying: "This is a holdup. Keep the bus moving at 55."

Driver of the bus, 47-year-old Gordon L. Beckley, a veteran driver of 18 years, complied with the order, investigators said, and two other suspects stood up among passengers.

The two accomplices moved along the aisle, taking wallets, rings, watches and other valuables from the bus riders, said investigators.

They had finished robbing passengers when the bus reached the Rosemead-Lakewood Boulevards off ramp, and the gunman ordered the driver to exit the freeway. This he did, stopping on Lakewood Boulevard south of the freeway where the suspects fled afoot, deputies added.

The bus driver then drove back up the freeway, exiting on Paramount Boulevard to park and call deputies.

State rules out Nixon tax fraud

By BILL STALL

SACRAMENTO (AP) — President Nixon will have to pay California $4,263.72 in back state income taxes along with about $1,000 interest and a penalty of $39.17, state officials ruled Friday.

The President will file returns for 1969-72 soon and pay the amount due promptly, said Martin Huff, executive officer of the State Franchise Tax Board.

At the White House, a spokesman would not say whether Nixon would pay the taxes, or would contest the state's finding. "We will wait until we hear from the State Franchise Board directly," said Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren in response to questions.

The penalty is for failing to file a 1970 state tax return, Huff said. It amounts to 25 per cent of the tax due for that year.

But Huff said there was no evidence of fraud or criminal negligence in the failure of the President to file California returns during his presidential years.

"There has to be some evidence or indication of wilfulness and all the evidence was the other way around," Huff said at a news conference.

The failure to file "is not necessarily a criminal matter if he didn't believe he had a requirement to file, and that was the situation."

The back taxes are owed on Nixon's 1969 and 1970 income, including salary for 94 days he spent working in the state during those two years, the state ruled.

Nixon will have to file 1971 and 1972 returns, but will owe no taxes since California-allowed deductions more than offset his state-generated income for those years, Huff said.

Nixon also is filing a 1973 return, Huff said.

The state computed Nixon's California tax liability on the basis of the report of Congress' Joint

$1.1-billion suit in mine disaster

Combined News Services

BOISE, Idaho — A suit asking $1.1 billion in damages was filed Friday on behalf of the families of 56 miners killed in the Sunshine Mine disaster two years ago. Agnes House, the widow of one of the miners, filed the suit for herself and 220 others in U.S. District Court for Idaho. Court officials said it was the largest suit ever filed in the district. The suit charges 21 companies and the federal government with complicity in the deaths of the miners in the fire at Kellogg. The underground fire on May 2, 1972, killed 91 miners. The suit claims the defendants provided false or inaccurate information about the hazards of products used in the mine and were willfully negligent by providing or installing inadequate equipment and materials for use in the mine.

Storms rake wide areas

Torrential rains flooded sections of central Louisiana Friday and a tornado tossed mobile homes around like match boxes at Alexandria. Snow and rain, meantime, fell across the central and northern Plains. Twelve inches of snow piled up at Harrison in Nebraska's Panhandle. Gale warnings flew over the upper Great Lakes and cloudiness spread into the East as the Easter weekend began.

11 dead in plane wreckage

HONOLULU — The bodies of 11 persons were recovered from the wreckage of a sight-seeing plane on the slopes of a dormant Hawaiian volcano Friday. Ten of the dead were mainland visitors whose names were withheld until their families were notified. The other victim was Vincent E. Morine, 24, of Honolulu, the pilot of the twin-engine Beechcraft. The wreckage was spotted early Friday at the 7,500-foot level of the eastern slope of Mauna Loa, about 31 miles southwest of Hilo on Hawaii Island, according to the Coast Guard.

North Viets overrun key outpost

SAIGON — Waves of South Vietnamese bombers retaliated Friday after thousands of North Vietnamese troops spearheaded by tanks overran a key government post 50 miles north of Saigon after a 13-month siege. The Saigon command said the bombers leveled their own Tong Le Chan base hours after it fell to the North Vietnamese. The bombers then struck at Viet Cong headquarters at Loc Ninh, some 25 miles further north, military informants said. Meantime in Paris, the Saigon delegation walked out of talks with the Viet Cong in protest over the North Vietnamese seizure of the village. The two sides have been meeting fruitlessly in Paris for more than a year on the political future of South Vietnam.

Communist power role promised

PARIS — Francois Mitterrand, presidential candidate of the powerful French leftist alliance, said Friday if elected his government would include Communists. Mitterrand, 57 and in his third presidential race, cited the precedent of Gen. Charles de Gaulle having brought Communists into the provisional government he formed after the liberation of Paris in 1944. "Why should I deprive myself of them in a situation much less perilous for civil peace? Why should I deprive myself of the representatives of all the workers' forces?" Mitterrand asked a press conference where he outlined his platform. Mitterrand, a Socialist, has the full support of France's strong Communist party and some small leftist groups for the election. He is favored to lead the first round of voting against three nonleftist but would need over 50 per cent of the vote to win. If no candidate gets a plurality, the two top candidates go into a run-off, where Mitterrand would face a solid nonleftist bloc.

Student loses car—but has last laugh

Residents fed up with illegal parking by students at the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois finally took matters into their own hands. They hired a bricklayer and had a wall built around the auto of a repeated violator at a cost of $410 and said they were prepared to arrest him for trespassing if he tried to get the car out.

On Friday, a city tow truck pulled down the wall after the car was found to be stolen from a suburban car dealer. Police said license plates on the 1974 sports model checked out to a 1960 auto.

Nevertheless, residents thought they made their point to the students, who neighbors complain, park repeatedly on private property, including back yards, and in alleys blocking garages.

Roy Dorgan, a spokesman for a neighbors' group, said: "We picketed the school a couple of times this year, and we're always calling the police."

He said the property owner where the car was parked had 60 illegally parked cars towed away in the last year.

Neighbors said the driver of the walled-in car was warned to move Thursday morning. After the warning, the student started to back the car out as the owner of the property left for an errand.

When the owner returned, the car was there again.

"We were talking about it and somebody said, 'Why not build a brick wall?'" said Dorgan.

Before Dorgan learned the auto was stolen, he was confident the scheme would help solve the problem. If the wall episode doesn't make its point with the students, Dorgan says residents have other schemes in mind.

People in the news

Diplomacy yes, protocol no

Combined News Services

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger may make foreign policy with Germanic efficiency, but his protocol operation is beginning to resemble a man eating spaghetti with a monkey wrench.

The latest bumble was Friday when Kissinger was to lunch at the State Department with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

With a bouncy stride and a wide smile, Kissinger crossed the large lobby to the diplomatic entrance about 1:40 p.m., confident in the advice of his staff that Gromyko's arrival was imminent.

For 15 minutes Kissinger stood uneasily on the curb, shuffling his feet and waiting for the Soviet limousines, all the time fending off reporters' questions. At one point he looked desperately toward the street and said jokingly, "Where is Gromyko now that I need him?"

The secretary appeared to take the delay with good grace, but some State Department employees predicted an explosion of anger when Kissinger was out of public sight.

This happened Thursday when another scheduling foul-up left Kissinger embarrassed in public.

HENRY KISSINGER Embarrassed by Faux Pas

Boumedienne arrived five minutes late, but that was one minute earlier than Kissinger.

After seeing the secretary was not there to meet him, the Algerian leader got on a public elevator. Just then Kissinger's own private elevator arrived and the secretary scurried across the floor to reach Boumedienne just before the doors closed.

Department sources said Kissinger was still livid on Friday about the foul-up. "He blamed everyone but himself," one official said.

Nude flap

A stripper who measures 44-28-38 and uses the billing of "Miss Nude Universe" might lead people to think she is the real Miss Universe "with her clothes off," according to a suit filed Friday in New York.

The operators of Miss Universe Inc. asked Manhattan Supreme Court Justice Harold Baer to prohibit Kellie Everts, 25, from using the "nude" title, which Miss Everts says she won at a contest in San Bernardino, Calif., seven years ago.

An attorney for the pageant argued that people may think Miss Everts is the real Miss Universe "with her clothes off" and the pageant could lose some of its sponsors, especially in places "like Illinois or South Dakota."

Third try

Singer Vic Damone and Becky Ann Jones were married Friday night at Westwood United Methodist Church, three weeks after his second wife died from an overdose of drugs.

About so big

Stacie Alexander, 11, one of five Florida youths sent to hospital with fish bites Friday, tells about fish that bit her on foot at Bakers Haulover beach north of Miami Beach. Lifeguards said problems arose when schools of hungry predators, largely bluefish, chased mullets into coastal waters. Bathers got bit when they got in the way of the attack.

Giving in

A Nevada bordello owner says she has decided she'd rather move than sue.

So, Beverley Harrell said, she will move Cottontail Ranch off government land rented for $100 a year to private property a half-mile away.

She said it made more sense to move the five trailers she's run as a brothel since 1970 in the desert 200 miles from Las Vegas than to continue her suit against the Bureau of Land Management.

The bureau had contended prostitution was an illegal use of federal land. It is legal in most of rural Nevada.

Unafraid

"I'm not afraid of dying," says Rosemary Sharkey, 35, who has been given up to three more months of life. "There are no wheelchairs in heaven."

A car accident in 1956 confined her to a wheelchair, and now she has a malignant bone disease.

She and her husband, William, have started a program called "Dogs for the Disabled" and would like to have a number of kennels established for training dogs to help the handicapped.

But before she dies, Mrs. Sharkey said, she would like to see her dream realized of a multi-million dollar center for the physically and mentally handicapped.

"I believe there is one miracle left in my life that will make this all possible," she said.

Simon

President Nixon was believed ready Friday to nominate energy chief William E. Simon to succeed George P. Shultz as Treasury secretary. Shultz is to resign sometime in May.

An administration source predicted, meanwhile, that Simon will be replaced as federal energy administrator by his deputy, John Sawhill.

Simon, a former Wall Street investment banker who kept his title as deputy Treasury secretary while heading the Federal Energy Office, is Shultz' personal choice as his successor.

Like Shultz, Simon takes a classical view of price as an allocator of economic resources. Officials close to him say he believes the marketplace is the arbiter of supply and price and that he opposes more government regulation than is necessary.

Gallant

On April 18, 1918, Cpl. Ernest A. Sheer darted through a hail of bullets on a French battlefield, captured a German machine gun and turned it on the enemy, singlehandedly capturing 47 German soldiers.

He'll receive a medal for his actions Monday at age 77.

In 1919, when Sheer was presented with France's highest military decoration, the Croix De Guerre, he was told he had been recommended for the United States' Distinguished Service Cross. But the recommendation, it was later discovered, never made it into the U.S. Army's official records.

Shirley Barrett, an interested Rock Island resident, decided six years ago to find out why Sheer had never received a medal from his own government for his gallantry. It was found that the matter had been overlooked, and the Army has decided not to let Sheer's heroism go unrewarded.

After a review of Sheer's case, Secretary of the Army Howard Callaway ordered that the World War I hero be given the Silver Star. He will be presented the Silver Star for heroism Monday in ceremonies at the Rock Island Arsenal.

Ruckelshaus

William D. Ruckelshaus, former deputy U.S. attorney general, has been hired by the Florida Apartment Association to fight rising electric bills; it was announced Friday in Tallahassee.

Ruckelshaus is to visit Tallahassee next week to question officials about the way fuel costs are passed on to consumers. The statewide association represents owners of more than 100,000 apartment units.

Ruckelshaus quit as deputy attorney general rather than follow President Nixon's order to fire former Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox. He also is former head of the Environmental Protection Agency and was an acting director of the FBI.

Breaking point

An Army psychiatrist said Friday that Spec. 4 Melvin Smith knew right from wrong at the time a top sergeant was shot and killed in Vietnam.

Testifying at Smith's second court martial at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., Dr. Clothilde Bowen, chief of psychiatry at the Fitzsimmon Army Medical Center, Denver, was one of the prosecution's final witnesses.

She said that Smith, 25, a Chicago Black Muslim, was "extremely angry" at the time of the shooting and it was "the only way to work out his anger."

"I think he (Smith) was so built up with fury—we can all stand up to just so much. I was fortunate enough to examine 15 POWs and I know what happens. Each has his own breaking point."

Outfoxed

The 20th Century-Fox film Corp. has turned down the request of David Merrick, the Broadway producer and the company's largest stockholder, for representation on the board, it was learned Friday in Los Angeles.

The action, for the time being at least, seems to rule out a role for Merrick in Fox management.

The annual meeting is scheduled for May 21 in Los Angeles. Merrick now controls slightly less than 10 per cent of the stock, and those who control or influence other known large blocks of stock have indicated their support of management or a lack of interest in control.

Merrick told the securities and exchange commission last month that he had no present plans for a proxy contest. But he indicated that he might increase his stock holdings and fight for control later if he did not get board representation.

Romance over

The Olympic Games romance that seared a hole in the Iron Curtain ended Friday when Hal Connolly and his wife Olga Fikotova were divorced after 17 years of marriage.

Santa Monica Superior Court Commissioner Jacqueline Weiss dissolved the marriage on grounds of irreconcilable differences.

Connolly won the 1956 Olympic Games gold medal in the hammer throw at Melbourne, Australia. There he met Czechoslovakian discus thrower Olga, who had won the gold medal in her event. Their romance blossomed and they were married in Prague a year later.

Six months ago, Connolly, 42, filed for divorce when each wanted to pursue different lives. Olga, 41, has been doing much writing and speaking recently. Connolly is a high school teacher.

Low-fare program

RTD renews subsidy plea

trial commuter rail program.

THE RTD'S request comes at a time when supervisors have expressed discontent with the operation of the bus line and at this point, it does not appear that the board would be willing to extend subsidy of the $25-cent-fare plan beyond June 30.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, who pioneered the low-fare program, has on several occasions attacked the RTD for not making proper use of its buses. Just recently, Supervisor Ernest Debs indicated he felt the $25-cent-fare had not attracted enough extra riders to warrant the $3 million a month the county is paying through June 30.

Last Tuesday, officials reported that the 25-cent program had attracted an extra 450,000 riders in the first week since the program began April 1. This represented an average daily increase of about 90,000, but Hahn has said he would expect that the daily increase should be as high as 200,000 if the program is to be a success.

Friday Hahn held a meeting with RTD President Tom Neusom urging him to begin using buses which are parked in district yards in a grid system on major north-south and east-west streets during off-peak hours.

EARLIER this week, Hahn complained bitterly when told by county Road Commissioner Irv Morhar that a check by his staff had shown about 250 buses were standing idle during one Friday morning's rush hour.

Hahn also urged Neusom to reduce monthly passes for senior citizens from the present $9 to $4 beginning in May. He also wants student fares to be reduced to the $4 monthly rate, and he requested that the blind be allowed to travel free.

Under the reduced, 25-cent program, the monthly pass for regular commuters is $10, and senior citizens complained they were being overlooked since their passes were only $1 less than the rates for regular riders.

Sharp case probe to end next week

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

A deputy district attorney said Friday that the investigation that led to the arrest of Long Beach City Councilman Wayne B. Sharp on a felony charge of receiving stolen property would end early next week.

Michael Marcus, a deputy district attorney from the Organized Crime and Narcotics Division, would not rule out the possibility of further arrests or additional charges against Sharp.

"The investigation is continuing," Marcus told the Independent, Press-Telegram, "it will probably close Monday or Tuesday."

Sharp, 46, was arrested Thursday by two district attorney's investigators after he allegedly sold one of them a .357 magnum Ruger pistol taken in a Long Beach burglary three years ago.

The two investigators, Helmut Bauer and John Goeke, took Sharp into custody in the parking lot of his restaurant, the Red Witch Inn, 700 Henry Ford Ave.

Bauer and Goeke also said that Sharp offered $300 for the purchase of stereo equipment he knew to be stolen.

Sharp was released on his own recognizance

Thursday from county men's central jail in Los Angeles. Bail had originally been set at $1,000.

Marcus, the district attorney's official who wrote the search warrant and helped to look through Sharp's home at 3615 Country Club Drive, declined to comment on the results of the search.

"We are checking serial numbers," Marcus said, without explanation. It is not yet certain how many charges Sharp will face, Marcus said.

The five-year councilman's arraignment has been set for April 19 at 8:30 a.m. in Division 30 of Los Angeles Municipal Court, but Marcus said that the date may change next week.

Richard Wilson, who has frequently represented Sharp in legal matters, said that the councilman may soon have a statement on the incident.

Edward P. George Jr., Sharp's attorney and Wilson's law partner, had no comment on the charge.

Steven Trott, the deputy district attorney who headed the six-man investigative team with Marcus, said that "there are more aspects to this case which will soon become public."

Restore U.S. funds, school officials ask

PASADENA (AP) — Pasadena school district officials appealed Friday to 20th District congressman Carlos J. Moorhead to help restore emergency federal funds cut off because an integration plan was not implemented.

Moorhead, R-Glendale, said he would do his best to convince the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was in error when it stripped the district Thursday of the $1.68 million.

THE district had been receiving the funds under the government's Emergency School Aid Act of 1971, administered by HEW. Officials of HEW said it detected violations in the district's 3½-year-old integration plan.

Moorhead said he felt HEW "definitely overstepped its bounds," and added that the school board has been meeting the requirements of the law and is "giving first-class education to both white and black students."

Imperiled condors not breeding, expert says

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — North America's largest soaring bird, the majestic California condor, is losing the urge to mate and the crag-dwelling vultures have fallen victim to man's encroachment, a biologist warns.

"The population is probably the lowest it's ever been. We've seen very little nesting activity and it looks pretty critical," Sanford Wilbur, researcher for the U.S. Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, said Thursday.

Wilbur told the Condor Advisory Committee, an independent group of

This type of interference by the federal government detracts from the education of both blacks and whites."

The stoppage of the funds affects 11 education programs in the district's 32 regular schools, assisting about 9,000 minority children with low achievement in reading and mathematics. Also affected are about 1,100 children in parochial schools.

MOORHEAD was cautious about how he would approach the matter. "I do not want to do anything that is not in the best interest of the school district. I will get on the phone with Mr. (Casper) Weinberger."

"I can intervene, but we have to remember that the executive branch has the control in this case."

He said he will attempt to determine what HEW considers to be violations of the integration plan, in hopes the district can correct any errors.

wildlife experts, that the almost-extinct "supervulture" population has dwindled from 60 to 50 members and no known young were raised last year.

The condor, a relic of the Pleistocene Age, feeds exclusively on carrion, and lives in the 53,000-acre Sespe Wildlife Area in the Los Padres National Forest around San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties.

The condor, which spreads its wings to an awesome nine feet, is on the protected species list.

Twice licensed

I own a beauty shop in Long Beach and I recently paid all of my state and city license fees for 1974. For the past seven years, I've also paid a $2.50 annual health department fee and during that time only two city inspectors have been in my shop and neither of them seemed to know how to conduct the type of thorough inspection we receive from the state. Now the city health fee has gone up to $8. Why is it necessary for the city to duplicate the state inspection. Isn't the state licensed businessman already under enough control? R. B., Long Beach.

Long Beach Health Department officials maintain the city inspections cover areas not checked by state personnel. L. G. Estes, director of the department's environmental health division, said the city inspectors generally check the building itself while state personnel concentrate on the actual running of your shop. The city inspectors check the building's water pipes and sewer system and they look for any structural problems or rodent or insect pests. State inspectors examine your equipment and supplies to make sure they conform to state code, Estes said. He added that, according to health department records, your shop has been inspected by the city four times in the last seven years.

Benefits

As the daughter of a disabled veteran, I'm entitled to GI education benefits. I started school in August and since then I've had nothing but problems in trying to get my benefits. I received no money until November and since then, the amount of my monthly payments has varied. In March, my benefits stopped altogether and I have no money to live on. Can ACTION LINE straighten this out? P. W., Long Beach.

At ACTION LINE's request, the Veterans Administration conducted an audit of your account, and, according to a VA spokesman, you were overpaid $258. For this reason, your March and April payments have been withheld and your benefits won't be resumed until May. A copy of the audit report and a letter of explanation have been sent to you by the VA.

Patient

My brother was a patient at Palmett North Convalescent Hospital, 3501 Cedar Ave., for two months. On March 8 he became very ill so he left the hospital and came home. He doesn't want to go back there. The hospital has refused to give him a refund because he left without giving notice. Can you help him get back part of the $325 fee he paid for March? Mrs. H. N., Long Beach.

No. According to Richard Feingold, administrator of the convalescent hospital and the residential care hotel where your brother stayed, you signed a contract for your brother promising he would give a 30-day notice before moving out unless he left to go into a hospital. Feingold said if your brother had told him he wasn't happy there, a refund could have been arranged for him, but, Feingold claims, your brother didn't even say he was leaving.

Pet project

Where can I buy a casket for a pet? R.F., Long Beach.

You can buy one at PetHaven Cemetery and Crematory, 18300 S. Figueroa St. in Gardena or at Sea Breeze Pet Cemetery and Crematory, 19542 Beach Blvd. in Huntington Beach. Prices, which depend on size and type, range from $20 at Sea Breeze for a plain redwood casket suitable for a very small dog to $145 at PetHaven for a satin-lined, combination vault and casket made for a very large dog.

Oil profits up 70%, bank says

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1973 worldwide profits of a representative group of 30 petroleum companies increased 70.9 per cent over the previous year, a Chase Manhattan Bank study shows.

The bank's energy economics division said in a special report on oil company profits that, "when considered superficially, a 71 per cent increase in profits appears excessive."

And the study said: "There is no doubt that much of the public now considers the earnings excessive." But the bank economists cautioned that "an analysis that is limited solely to the change for a single year is not only foolish and grossly misleading but can also be dishonest."

For the past five years, the group of 30 companies has had an annual average earnings growth of only 12 per cent. For the past 10 years, the annual average growth has been 9.9 per cent, the study said.

Analysis showed that 85 per cent of the 1973 profit increase occurred outside the United States and that devaluation of the dollar was the single most influential factor in the general profit rise, it said.

Much of the remaining profit rise was attributable to increased demand for petroleum which amount to 3.2 million barrels a day more than in 1972, the bank said.

23 areas cited for offshore drilling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) will recommend that leasing for offshore oil drilling be undertaken in 23 areas along the Atlantic Coast and the Gulf of Alaska, it was disclosed Friday.

The CEQ, in a report not scheduled for public release until April 18, concluded that leasing could now begin, although it admitted that serious environmental consequences could develop in the event of an oil spill, storms or other accidents.

The council said leasing in virgin areas in the Atlantic and Gulf of Alaska represents a "critical public policy issue because of its importance to our nation's energy needs, its risk for damage to the environment and its impact, as a result of construction of refineries and other support facilities, on the economy and social structure of communities onshore."

However, in a summary statement of a 318 page report on the oil prospects in the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS), the council concluded that leasing "can be undertaken in these waters under carefully stipulated and controlled conditions..."

The report said that foremost among concerns, should leasing begin, is that the activities "take place under a policy which puts very high priority on environmental protection, particularly in areas where uncertainty is great."

Covered in the report, which President Nixon called for one year ago, are nine potential drilling sites in the Gulf of Alaska, four in the New England area, five in the Baltimore Canyon trough off the Middle Atlantic, and five in the southeast Georgia Embayment off the coast from northern Florida to South Carolina.

In addition, the social and economic effects of offshore drilling were studied in a number of sample onshore areas most likely to be affected if oil production from the OCS becomes a reality.

"The risk of damage to human and natural environments is an inseparable part of such development," the CEQ said. "The guiding principles must be to keep the risks to an acceptable level. Where the risk...is greater than that of an available alternative for meeting the same objectives, we should not move ahead until we know more and can do better."

"Where the risk is acceptable, we should proceed with caution and with a commitment to prevent and minimize potential damage."

The CEQ, in assessing the potential oil producing areas, classified each drilling site according to the risk involved. Two areas along Georges Bank, one of the most productive New England commercial fishing areas, were considered to pose the least risk, while the Alaska sites were considered to have the greatest risk factor.

The CEQ report does not qualify as an environmental impact statement, but Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., who released the summary, expressed concern that President Nixon might try to go ahead with the offshore leasing based solely on the CEQ report. Studds called the report "inadequate and incomplete" and urged further environmental studies.

The council said, however, that the OCS has promising potential for new sources of oil and gas and represents "one of the most important components of Project Independence," President Nixon's goal of energy self sufficiency by 1980. Although noting public concern for the beaches, tourist trade, commercial fisheries and recreation in the affected areas, the report stressed that substantial resources to meet the nation's energy needs could be gained through off shore drilling.

FEO denies leaks from Saudi Arabia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Office said Friday that Saudi Arabia did not "leak" oil through the recent Arab oil embargo, contrary to the impression given by a Commerce Department report earlier this week.

John Wilhelm, director of the FEO Office of Producer Country Affairs and Emergency Supply, said in an interview that the apparent discrepancy was caused by delays in the reporting of oil arrivals to the Commerce Department.

Wilhelm said a direct check by his office of the import documents showed that shipments of Saudi Arabian oil which appeared on Commerce Department import lists for January and February had actually arrived in the United States in November and had been loaded on tankers in the Persian Gulf before Oct. 16.

By HAROLD SCHMECK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's largest scientific organization warned Friday that America's energy problems were real, serious and enduring despite the popular belief that the difficulties vanished with the end of the Arab oil boycott.

The warning was delivered by the 130,000-member American Association for the Advancement of Science through its technical journal Science, which is devoted this week entirely to the energy problem.

At a news conference on the special issue, Dr. Philip H. Abelson, editor of Science, said his guess was that in two years the United States would be in worse trouble from oil shortages than it was during the embargo, even if imported oil continued to flow.

In an editorial in the magazine he said the United States would need large quantities of imported oil just to meet the ever-increasing national need for gasoline.

Within weeks, he estimated, oil imports will be topping the level of a year ago.

"I feel that the American public is not taking the problem seriously enough," he said.

Dr. James R. Murray, of the National Opinion Research Center, Chicago, said that a sampling during the last three weeks showed already there had been a drop in the public's perception of an energy crisis.

"Clearly, the public believes that fuel shortages are not inevitable in the future and will most likely be solved within four or five years," he and his colleagues at the center said in an article in Science.

Other articles in the 192-page issue suggested that experts do not believe the basic problem will be solved in such a short range, except by increasing United States dependence on imported supplies.

The magazine, dated April 19, was distributed Friday. Normally Science covers a broad range of topics in the physical, biological and behavioral sciences. Only once before, in the memory of the staff, has an issue been devoted exclusively to one topic. That was the Jan. 30, 1970 issue devoted to the scientific results of man's first landing on the moon.

The current issue contains 27 articles on a broad range of subjects related to energy, including public policy, economics, impact of energy supplies on food production, and the technical possibilities of developing new energy sources.

While there was by no means a uniform viewpoint in all of the articles, they agreed generally in viewing the problems of energy supply and demand as important and unlikely to be disposed of quickly.

"Taken together, the contents of the issue represents a major statement on the energy crisis by America's scientific community," said a printed statement distributed with the issue at the news conference.

U.S. energy crisis warning

By HENRY TANNER
CAIRO—Egypt's famous $400 million oil pipeline from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean will not be built by an American firm, the Bechtel Company of California, but is likely to be constructed by a group of Italian companies, informed diplomatic sources revealed Friday.

The Bechtel Company bowed out after Egypt refused its demand for a hefty increase in the price of construction of Sumed, the pipeline's official name—an acronym for Suez-Mediterranean—the sources said.

Bechtel had signed the contract on Oct. 1, a few days before the start of the October war. The action at the time was regarded as having far-reaching political and economic implications because it marked the first large-scale American involvement in Egypt since Secretary of State John Foster Dulles had decided against helping the Egyptians build the Aswan Dam in 1956.

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

In its new role, Bechtel will simply have a management contract to supervise the work and advise the Egyptian government, the sources said. They called the new arrangement "a face-saving arrangement" for Bechtel.

The Italian companies that have submitted a bid for the joint construction of the pipeline include some of Italy's biggest industrial concerns—Montubi, a major pipeline manufacturer; Chimi, an engineering firm; Italsider, and Saipem-Proietti, the latter a subsidiary of Italy's national petroleum company, Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi.

The draft contract submitted by the Italian companies is now in the last stages of consideration here, according to the sources.

Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi used to play a major role in Egypt, notably in developing the oil fields in the Sinai now under Israeli control. In recent months E.N.I. has made it clear here that it would like to take a major part in Egyptian postwar reconstruction through its engineering subsidiaries.

Bechtel's withdrawal from the actual construction job is expected to lead automatically to the cancellation of an offer of a $100 million loan to Egypt by the American Export-Import Bank. The loan offer was tied to the purchase of American materials for the construction of the pipeline.

Private American capital, however, has also offered loans to Egypt for her part in the construction of Sumed. One such offer was from Chase Manhattan bank. Another was from a group including the First National City bank.

American firm bows out of Egypt pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential study team Friday recommended the establishment of four new federal offices to coordinate government energy activities, rather than consolidation of existing energy-related agencies.

The study, requested by President Nixon last June 29, was headed by William G. Doub, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, who told newsmen it sought "doable" solutions that could be achieved within 12 to 18 months.

Doub's team found federal energy regulation, now scattered among more than 40 agencies, to be poorly coordinated, unresponsive to change, and lacking an overall policy.

To start remedying these problems, the team recommended establishment of:

— A National Energy Council "to provide comprehensive policy guidance to energy regulatory agencies..."

— A new office to smooth out the processing of federal licenses for energy-related projects, which often require clearance through a bewildering maze of federal agencies.

— A centralized federal energy data office to collect and distribute energy information.

— A new federal office to coordinate federal and state energy policies and actions.

The team admitted that even a new National Energy Council reporting to the president might not be able to get all federal agencies working in the same direction.

If it included representatives of program agencies, the report said, it could become a scene of interagency maneuvering that might agree only on policies that would be "bland or too fuzzy to provide clear guidance."

FHA-VA ceiling boosted to 8½%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Friday night boosted from 8¼ to 8½ per cent the federal ceiling on mortgage loans backed by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration.

The change is effective Monday.

James T. Lynn, secretary of the Housing and Urban Development Department, said he had reluctantly agreed to boost the rate as the only alternative under the currently sharp jump in interest rates across the economy.

He said it was vital because it would keep FHA and VA mortgage loans as an available source of money for American home buyers.

The FHA insures mortgages at the 8½ per cent rate and the VA guarantees them at that rate.

Homebuyers may borrow a maximum of $33,000 to buy a home under the two programs.

Lynn had considered only a few weeks ago dropping the mortgage ceiling further, but a sudden upsurge in the prime interest rate changed his plans.

Walter B. Williams, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, praised Lynn's move, saying it should make more money available using the government-backed programs to buy homes.

Lynn said that if he had kept the ceiling at its current rate, it would have meant that sellers would have had to pay more "points," a one-time interest charge designed to make up the difference between the market rate for money and the interest ceiling.

Keeping the rate at 8½ per cent, therefore, would have increased the price of homes, Lynn said.

At the same time, Lynn announced that a complex plan for subsidizing interest rates for 200,000 prospective homebuyers at below market rates would continue in effect.

Lynn announced the plan in January. It provided for a 7½ per cent ceiling for up to $6.6 billion in FHA and VA mortgages.

Under that plan, the government subsidizes the difference between the going market rate for money and the 7½ per cent interest rate.

Food boycott chief eyes new cost war

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mrs. Ethel Rosen, whose Women's War on Prices began a national meat boycott last year, said Friday she may do battle again in a few months if food prices don't come down.

The Wilmette mother of two children began her campaign to lower prices in 1972 when she organized the WWP.

"People aren't buying meat because they just can't afford it," Mrs. Rosen said. "Then too, the meat boycott last year was so effective, it changed the public's eating habits."

Still, she said, "There is going to be consumer reaction in about five months if prices don't come down."

Mrs. Rosen said she is going after Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, large conglomerates, trade associations and stores this time and not the small farmer.

"Thirty-nine per cent of the food in this country is produced by 2 per cent of the farmers," she said. "Conglomerates and industry are in it now and the farmers are catering to them."

Mrs. Rosen blames the trade associations for the recent meat shortage, saying the shortage was manufactured and that the associations forced "the farmers to sit back and not bring their cattle to market. They were scared to death and in the meantime, the conglomerates brought their meat in at 86 cents per pound."

"But what I really want to know," Mrs. Rosen said, "is what is Earl Butz doing over in China making a favored nation trade agreement with them? If we're so rich in grain, why don't grain prices go down?"

Nixon OKs retroactive pay raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal employee pay raises retroactive to Oct. 1, 1972, were cleared by an executive order signed by President Nixon, White House press aide Gerald L. Warren announced Friday.

The retroactive raises go to civilian federal employees and members of the armed services. The raises, cleared by a court contest, will affect about 2.1 million federal white collar workers and cost an estimated $500 million.

On Thursday Nixon signed a supplemental appropriations bill that provides funds for the raises.

The President had delayed the pay increase from October, 1972, until January, 1973, citing the 1972 wage guidelines and the administration battle against inflation.

But the 60,000 member National Treasury Employees Union brought suit contesting the White House decision and the U.S. Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia ruled the President's action illegal on Jan. 25 this year.

In wake of labor pact

Increased steel prices loom on horizon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Steel industry and union negotiators settled Friday on a new three-year contract which the top management bargainer called "expensive" and inflationary and which he said probably would lead to higher steel prices.

The agreement provided the 350,000 workers in the basic steel industry with a wage boost of 67.2 cents an hour over 36 months, plus an extra one cent an hour for each 0.3 point rise in the Consumer Price Index published by the government.

The package also provided extensive improvements and fringe benefits, including a new company-paid dental insurance plan for employees and their families, a new company-paid medical insurance plan for retirees and their families, and cost of living increases for pensions.

"It's an expensive settlement," chief industry negotiator R. Heath Larry, a vice president of U.S. Steel, told a news conference after the settlement was reached. "But it's not out of line with other settlements in recent months."

The steel industry agreement was similar to recent settlements by the United Steel Workers union (USW) with the aluminum and can industries.

Larry declined to say flatly whether the settlement would lead to higher steel prices. But he said costs already had been rising steadily for the steel firms and their only way to recover these increased costs was to raise prices.

USW President I. W. Abel told the same news conference the settlement was not inflationary. But Larry disagreed, saying it was inflationary because it exceeded the long-term productivity increase of 3 per cent a year in the steel industry.

Neither Abel nor Larry would put a percentage increase on the settlement, but Abel said the average wage in the steel industry now is $5.88 per hour. Thus the basic wage increase of 67.2 cents in the agreement would boost this to more than $6.55 per hour, plus whatever the cost of living escalator clause adds.

With the cost of living now rising at more than 10 per cent a year, that could mean sizeable increases over the next three years.

The settlement between the union and the 10 basic steel companies came three days before the Monday deadline that would have sent all unresolved national bargaining issues to binding arbitration.

Food chains, unions form wage-labor panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top food chain executives and union leaders have formed a joint panel to look into wage disputes and labor problems facing the food industry, the government said Friday.

John T. Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council, hailed establishment of the labor-management committee as a "significant and constructive development in the labor relations area."

ALTHOUGH the committee's influence over wage settlements in the industry will be entirely voluntary, Dunlop indicated it could assume greater authority if both sides agree.

"I would not wish this to be viewed as a substitute for wage control," he said. But, asked if the committee might pass on individual wage increases or make recommendations, Dunlop said, "That is a matter to be left to the committee."

Mediation will be one of the areas the committee will probably be involved in, he indicated.

THE committee will also look into bottlenecks that create inefficiencies, thereby causing food prices to rise, and will try to improve productivity, Dunlop said.

The committee's formation will also give the industry a forum for the first time to talk about disputes on the national level, he said.

Although the committee will have no legal power, it is similar in approach to a panel in the construction industry, where emphasis is placed on a joint labor-management solution to wage disputes.

Asked if the food committee might turn into an "umpire" of wage disputes, Dunlop said he hoped it would not start out that way, but would instead be a mediating body.

Nixon names Southlanders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Announcing a series of appointments, President Nixon Friday named six members of the Air Quality Advisory Board and six others to the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

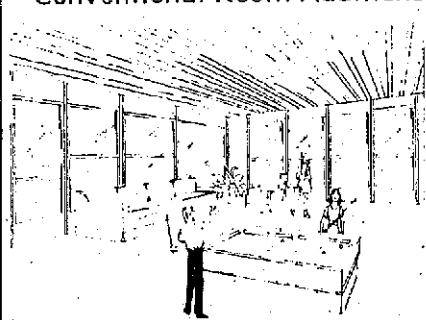

The appointees included a Los Angeles minister and a Santa Ana businessman.

The Rev. Don Moomaw of Los Angeles was appointed to the Physical Fitness Council and James E. Johnson of Santa Ana was named to a three-year term on the Air Quality Supervisory Board.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Favorable adjustment characterizes all of your actions this coming year. Personal economy becomes natural, leaves better resources for important ventures still in their earlier stages of development. Social movement is fluent, subject to either whim or plan; it's up to you. Today's natives often suffer wanderlust, tend to pursue independent courses whatever the price, wherever they lead.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Business is minimal but easily negotiated within special limits. Be alert and busy to improve your public image. Reconcile differences.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Today you can balance out any conflicts, settle things peacefully without taking sides. Serious ideas encounter a meeting of the minds.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Full consultations yield rewards beyond expectations where you have reasonable prospects to begin with. Trim family and personal budgets.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Make amends wherever appropriate; exert yourself to get your show on the road. It's a lengthy day offering a variety of activity. Handle personal affairs.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Attend any health care problems promptly. The course of least resistance once you're through your normal Saturday chores is likely the best.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Leaving all material considerations aside, turn your attention to the quality of your relationships, what you share. Quiet, somewhat formal gatherings are good to arrange, offer subtle benefits.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be consistent, go on through to finish what you started some time ago. Neglected matters become more urgent - get them over with.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family reunions are the favored sort of social action today. Take the time to tidy up correspondence and leftover details of weekend routines.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Postpone financial moves. Concentrate on the exchanges going on near you; be a part of your local or family group in spirit as well as technically.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Continue with old plans and their further elaboration rather than plunge ahead into new ventures. Cater to the hopes of those you love.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): For once, let all activity flow at minimum. There are many angles to think about, much to learn by watching and listening while remaining quiet.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Make this a personal holiday, keeping routines simple while leaving nothing to chance. It's just as well you grant others the freedom to pursue their own paths.

Ford confirms he would oust Ziegler

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford's office confirms he indicated Ronald L. Ziegler would not be retained as White House press secretary if Ford became President, and that he has reservations about Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger.

But press aide Paul Miltich said Ford was not talking in terms of directly firing either Ziegler or Schlesinger when he answered questions on possible appointees if he became President for an article in the current New Republic magazine.

Miltich said he is less upset with the article than with columnist William Safire's criticism that it is unseemly for Ford "to be confiding his plans for the assumption of power while the body of the sitting president is still warm."

Safire's column, Miltich said, "makes it sound like Ford is waiting in the wings frothing at the mouth wanting to be president. This is just not an accurate characterization."

The press secretary pointed out that the New Republic article by John Osborne starts by saying Ford emphasizes both publicly and privately that he expects President Nixon to complete his term.

Ford did tell Osborne, Miltich confirmed, that he felt Defense Secretary Schlesinger did not know how to deal with Congress.

"But what secretary of defense has been particularly adept at dealing with Congress, except maybe Mel Laird?" Miltich added.

At the Pentagon, a spokesman said Schlesinger would have no comment.

During a question and answer session with the National Press Club Thursday, Schlesinger said he had had "a good working relationship with Gerald Ford, but I am not expecting any changes to occur and in the future I am prepared to serve ... so long as I am needed."

At the same time, Schlesinger said, "I expect to continue to serve this president," referring to President Nixon.

Osborne's article says Ford blames Schlesinger partly for House rejection last week of increased U.S. military aid for South Vietnam and says whether Schlesinger would be in Ford's Cabinet is "the big question mark."

Ford indicated Ziegler would not be his press secretary simply because Ford would routinely name his own press secretary, Miltich said.

Safire's column in Thursday's New York Times quoted Ford as denying the statement in the New Republic story that Ford gets so restive with Nixon's small talk that Ford has taken to breaking off conversations with Nixon.

Miltich said Ford meant to say that when he talks to the President he doesn't want to "overstay his welcome."

Osborne's article repeats Ford's testimony at his House confirmation hearing that as president he would urge Dr. Henry A. Kissinger to remain secretary of state.

It also says retired Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. would be asked to return to the cabinet.

It says Ford would want to keep Rogers Morton as interior secretary, Peter Brennan as labor secretary and James Lynn as secretary of housing and urban development.

Aside from Haig, it says, Ford would want L. William Seidman, a Grand Rapids lawyer and friend, or Philip Buchen, Ford's old law partner, to be among his top aides.

Lawyer claims 'prejudicial evidence'

Chapin asks 'dirty tricks' retrial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The lawyer for former presidential appointments secretary Dwight L. Chapin filed motions late Friday for acquittal and a new trial away from Washington.

Chapin was found guilty in U.S. District Court earlier this month on two counts of lying about the activities of political saboteur Donald H. Segretti in the 1972 presidential campaign.

The attorney, Jacob A. Stein, said the trial "was tainted by the admission of unduly prejudicial evidence." Stein referred specifically to the Humphrey-Jackson letter and the Chisholm news release which he said "undoubtedly created prejudice against the accused completely out of proportion of probative value of these items."

The documents were distributed by Segretti during the Florida Democratic primary. The letter accused Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson of sexual indiscretions, and the news release said that Rep. Shirley A. Chisholm of New York had mental problems.

ALL THREE were candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, and all three ran well behind in the Florida primary.

The motion said the jury's finding of guilt was based on Chapin's statement that he was "not familiar with" Segretti's distribution of any campaign literature.

"In no instance did the government prove that Mr. Segretti had any discussion with Mr. Chapin in which Mr. Segretti identified himself as the distributor of a particular item," the motion said.

"MR. SEGRETTI distributed only a very few items himself. The evidence was not sufficient to permit reasonable minds to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. Chapin was familiar with the items Mr. Segretti personally distributed."

The Humphrey-Jackson letter, the motion said, was distributed by a person working for Segretti, according to the trial testimony. "It cannot be said, therefore, that the defendant knew that Segretti distributed this item," it said.

The motion said testimony regarding the Chisholm press release "was that the defendant inquired of Mr. Segretti whether he was responsible, or involved with that piece." Responsibility or involvement, of course, does not establish that Mr. Segretti personally distributed the item.

"In summary, we know that Mr. Chapin and Mr. Segretti clearly understood that Mr. Segretti was to do nothing personally. Mr. Segretti recalls no discussion of distribution with Chapin in which Mr. Segretti told Mr. Chapin that Mr. Segretti departed from the plan and made a personal distribution of campaign materials."

"The verdict of a jury must therefore be based on speculation and therefore is legally indefensible," the motion said.

Chapin's lawyer also asked for acquittal on grounds the jury erred in concluding Chapin had said he did not recall giving instructions to Segretti about any particular candidate.

The motion said that Chapin had given Segretti instructions 12 to 18 months before Chapin's appearance before the grand jury April 11, 1973.

instructions or directions and the appearance before the grand jury and the absence of a motive to lie, compel the entry of a judgment of acquittal for the defendant," the motion said.

GSA ruling squelches plan for Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Services Administration said Friday President Nixon cannot take back or sell the papers he gave the National Archives even though the Internal Revenue Service has disallowed the tax deductions he took for the gift.

The ruling, should it stand as final, apparently would squelch plans of various businessmen's groups to buy the papers from Nixon as a means of helping him pay his assessed debt of $467,000 in back taxes and interest.

A spokesman said the GSA had long held the position that Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers was binding and the papers now belong to the government.

"That's been our position all along," he said. "I would stress there has been no new determination or change made in our attitude toward the donation."

The National Archives are a department of GSA, the federal government's "housekeeping" agency in charge of federal properties, buildings and the like.

Businessmen's groups in Louisiana and Texas have offered to pay Nixon as much as $1 million for the papers now resting in the archives in order to raise a fund from which he could pay his tax debt. The groups contend publication of the papers would more than return their purchase cost.

The White House has never commented on the question of whether Nixon would try to recover the gift in the light of the adverse tax ruling. But Gerald L. Warren, the deputy White House press secretary, said last week he thought it was "an open question" whether the papers now belonged to Nixon or the archives.

It was not immediately clear what weight the GSA's ruling carries. Presumably it would be binding unless successfully challenged in the courts or overturned by an act of Congress.

Nixon, Ford exchange of office urged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Oregon Gov. Tom McCall made a suggestion Friday that he thinks would solve the country's current political problems — President Nixon and Vice President Gerald Ford should change places.

In remarks prepared for a Commonwealth Club luncheon, McCall again called for Nixon's resignation. Then he suggested that the burden of the office of chief executive may be too great for one man to carry.

McCall said Ford should be elevated to the presidency "and Nixon should become vice president."

He said that instead of one man having to bear the entire burden, the responsibility of the presidency should be split.

"One could conceive of an arrangement under which the vice president would take charge of formulation and implementation of the country's foreign policy, while the president himself concentrated on domestic matters," McCall said.

The arrangement still would leave the country with one president, but would in effect divide the presidential power between two men — the president and the vice president, he said.

Gift or loan?

Arms aid to Israel debated

By LESLIE H. GELB

WASHINGTON — The Office of Management and Budget and the State Department are locked in a bureaucratic struggle over how much Israel should pay for the arms she has been getting since the October war.

When Congress voted a $2.2 billion aid package last December, it specified that Israel should repay $700 million and that the President should decide how much of the remaining $1.5 billion would be in credit sales and how much as a gift.

The legislative history of the bill makes clear, according to a number of congressional sources, that Congress expected all or most of the $1.5 billion to be given free.

Now, however, the Office of Management and Budget is arguing that Israel should pay for all of the aid, while the State Department is maintaining that most of the discretionary $1.5 billion should be provided free.

Several senators pressed Secretary of State

EXCLUSIVE N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

Henry Kissinger on the status of President Nixon's decision two days ago when the secretary appeared in closed session before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Committee sources said his answers were evasive.

At one point, according to the sources, Kissinger said that nothing could be done about the decision until it was clear who would be in the new Israel-li government. At another point, the same sources said, he dodged the question by saying he was trying to get the best agreement between Israel and Syria and that he needed a free hand.

Another source said that Kissinger had privately assured one of the senators after the meeting that the decision, to be made soon, would work out well for Israel.

Israeli diplomats said they were puzzled both by the delay in making the decision and on how it would turn out. Israeli sources said Kissinger had told them, "It's out of my hands; it's on the President's desk."

Two months ago, when Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban visited Washington, Kissinger told him the decision would come in one week. Two weeks ago, when Defense Minister Moshe Dayan came to Washington, Kissinger promised the answer in a few days.

Sources close to Kissinger insist that the delay has nothing to do with trying to gain leverage over Israel in the current Israeli-Syrian negotiations. They said the matter was before the President right now, and that he had to choose between the policy-related arguments of the State Department and the money arguments of the Office of Management and Budget.

One high official in the budget office explained its position as follows: "We're endeavoring to have all of the aid in credits as a simple financial matter. I can't say more than that."

Solons to study spy claim report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senior members of the Senate Armed Services Committee will review a White House report on alleged Pentagon spying on Henry A. Kissinger, it was disclosed Friday.

Chairman John M. Stennis, D-Miss., said he has named Sens. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., to review the report, which was prepared by David R. Young Jr., who was head of the White House "plumbers" investigative unit.

THE report, said to be more than 1,000 pages long, gives Young's account of the investigation into the activities of Navy Yeoman Charles Radford, who allegedly turned over to his Navy superiors classified documents obtained from Kissinger's White House office.

The study also is said to concern itself with leaks of National Security Council documents to syndicated columnist Jack Anderson.

Kissinger has testified he never knew of the existence of a Plumbers unit but had heard a tape recording of Young's interview of one of the principals in the case, Navy Adm. Robert O. Wellander.

Young was Kissinger's appointments secretary before becoming head of the plumbers.

STENNIS said the committee obtained the Young report after extensive negotiations with the White House.

ISRAEL RAID

the Popular Front of the Liberation of Palestine General Command, which Israel said slipped across the Lebanese border, Thursday ran through two apartment buildings in the Galilee town firing bazookas, submachine guns and grenades.

Three townsmen, five women and eight children and two Israeli security troops, died in the attack. Sixteen other Israelis were wounded.

In Damascus, the Syrian command said Israeli artillery Friday shelled Syrian border villages, wounding five children seriously. The communiqué said the fighting, which erupted early Friday with artillery and tanks between Syrian and Israeli troops, was continuing nearly 14 hours later.

The commandos were killed in an explosion inside a fourth floor apartment after being trapped by Israeli forces converging on the town, two miles from the Lebanese border.

The Israelis said a bullet fired by one of its forces detonated a satchel full of explosives carried by the Arabs. A spokesman for the guerrillas said the commandos were part of a "suicide squad" and they "killed themselves."

About 20,000 persons streamed north through the main street of the town and overflowed into a meadow of knee-high grass to attend the 20-minute ceremony in the cemetery.

Bereaved relatives flailed themselves and scratched their faces, drawing blood, as border policemen in green berets carried the plain pine coffins to the gravesites on their shoulders. A blue-and-white Israeli flag draped each coffin.

Israel Police Minister Shlomo Hillel told the mourners Israel will avenge the deaths, saying, "Our hand will reach them wherever they are. We won't lay down our swords until everyone is brought to justice."

"Government of Lebanon: the blood is on your head if you clear out the nests of terror from your territory. Beware, we have warned you."

Abou Abbas, member of the political bureau of the PFLP-GC summoned reporters to a secret rendezvous to explain his organization's motives.

"The PFLP-GC, in launching its fighters in such operations under the slogan of continuing the armed struggle and opening all Arab borders to resistance activities, realizes the importance of revolutionary violence in foiling the projects of a surrender settlement," Abbas said.

GOP chiefs warn Nixon to free tapes or be impeached

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans in Congress applied pressure on President Nixon Friday to comply with the House Judiciary Committee's subpoena demanding tapes that could be used as evidence against him in impeachment proceedings.

Senate sources said six senior senators—the GOP hierarchy in that body—had warned he would be flirting with impeachment on the grounds of contempt of Congress if he defied the demand for evidence.

TAX

purchase of his Western White House estate at San Clemente, the state said.

His 1970 California income included $58,918 in capital gains on the sale of some of the property at San Clemente and $15,635 for improvements to the oceanfront estate in Orange County.

The Franchise Tax Board, composed of two Republicans and one Democrat, ruled in February that Nixon was not a California resident for tax purposes. That affirmed a private legal opinion that Nixon had received from his own tax lawyers.

Nixon is being taxed as a nonresident on income generated from within the state, Huff said.

Huff said the state set no specific deadline for Nixon to pay the state tax.

Dean Butler of Los Angeles, the President's California tax attorney, said, "We have indicated we will accept their findings." But he had disagreements with tax board officials, Butler said.

He also disclosed for the first time that Nixon filed California income tax returns during the eight years he was vice president.

Huff said the board originally planned to assess Nixon a 25 per cent penalty for failure to file the 1969 return, but was persuaded by Butler that no penalty was warranted for that year. It would have amounted to another $1,027.

For the four years in question, the state calculated that Nixon had a total California-source income of $237,659 and allowable deductions of $242,702.

Deductions allowed for the entire period included $181,817 in interest paid on San Clemente loans, $52,148 in local property taxes and state taxes and $8,737 in charitable contributions.

After deductions, Nixon had taxable California income of $55,553 in 1969, $9,544 in 1970. He had net losses of $31,632 in 1971 and $38,508 in 1972.

The state ruled earlier that Nixon was not a tax resident of California for purposes of taxes on his full presidential salary of $250,000 a year. But Friday, the board said it had decided to tax a portion of the income corresponding to the amount of time the President spent working in California: 39 days in 1969, 55 days in 1970, 61 days in 1971 and 34 days in 1972.

The state also counted as income the personal use of government airplanes during California trips: $27,015 for the four years.

Gross taxable income for 1969-71 also included royalties of $9,957 on Nixon's book, "Six Crises," since it was written in California. Most of the royalties, $8,880, were received during 1970.

Nixon reported an average loss of $6,000 each year on the Nixon family's rented home in Whittier.

In computing Nixon's back federal taxes owed, the IRS said Nixon did not have to pay taxes for 1969 because the statute of limitations had expired. Nixon said he would pay them anyway.

Huff said Nixon had no choice but to pay state taxes for 1969 since the statute of limitations does not run in a case where no return was filed.

Huff said the penalty for not filing in 1970 was assessed because it was evident from Nixon's California income — mostly the sale of the San Clemente property and the book royalties — that he should have filed that year. State officials were persuaded by Nixon's lawyers that that was not the case for 1969.

some the White House has been most reluctant to yield.

These are recorded conversations which the committee's lawyers believe will either uphold or refute Nixon's denials that he was personally involved in the Watergate cover-up.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon would provide some "additional material" but he refused to say Nixon would comply in full.

Members of the committee readily acknowledged they had no way to compel Nixon to comply and the committee's legal staff agreed.

"If the President refuses to comply, the practical difficulties of enforcing the subpoena may well be insurmountable," the lawyers said in a memo.

But the memo said pointedly that "noncompliance may itself be a ground for impeachment."

Some committee members, all of whom are lawyers, said the legal doctrine of "irresistible inference" can justify the view that if Nixon withheld the tapes they contained evidence of his wrongdoing.

Senate sources said the warning to Nixon of the risks of noncompliance came at a meeting Tuesday between Republican leaders and Dean Burch, longtime associate of Sen. Barry Goldwater and now a White House functionary.

Attending the meeting were Sens. Hugh Scott, Pa., GOP leader; Robert P. Griffin, Mich., GOP whip; John G. Tower, Texas, GOP Policy Committee chairman; Norris Cotton, N.H., GOP caucus chairman; Wallace F. Bennett, Utah, caucus secretary, and William Brock, Tenn., GOP campaign committee chairman.

Nixon mansion tax value challenge loses in court

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A challenge to the assessment on President Nixon's San Clemente mansion was turned aside Friday in Santa Ana by Superior Court Judge Mark Soden, who denied a writ of mandamus sought by Orange County Supervisor Robert Battin.

Last December Battin contested the valuation of the Nixon compound, but lost before an assessment appeals board.

In Friday's court challenge, he sought to introduce what he said was "newly discovered, relative evidence that tends to impeach the experts' testimony." On a second ground, he contended that the appeals board had made "numerous procedural errors."

The board upheld Assessor Jack Vallerga's determination that the Nixon estate has a market value of $1,380,070 for this year's tax purposes.

Battin insisted the valuation should be $1.8 million. He told Soden that Nixon himself had set the value of his western home at that figure.

Battin's highly publicized move to subpoena President Nixon for Friday's hearing turned out to be, in the judge's words, "for publicity."

Soden disclosed that the subpoena was not served in Washington as wire services said, but was sent to San Clemente.

"It is common knowledge that he (the President) is not there, Soden said.

Battin, a Democrat, said his failures to increase the assessment were the result of "political bias" against him.

There were political overtones in a discussion between Battin and Soden.

Battin suggested the court should state whether it (the judge) contributed to Nixon's campaign and the judge reminded him that "it is not your prerogative to inquire."

"However," Soden continued, "I have contributed to President Nixon's campaign. I supported him then and I support him now. If you think I am not unbiased you have a right to challenge."

Battin did not challenge and the hearing proceeded.

street brawler from Manila's slum district, had himself nailed to a cross for the sixth straight year to fulfill a religious vow.

"When my two-year-old was ill, I promised that if he would get well, I would do this," Piring said before he went to the rice field outside town to be crucified again for about 10 seconds in an entourage complete with friends personifying the flagellants, the Roman guards and the two common criminals who accompanied Jesus Christ on his fateful voyage to Golgotha in Biblical days.

In Northern Ireland, British soldiers ignored a call by the militant Catholic Irish Republican Army for an eight-day Easter truce and continued a relentless search of Catholic homes for suspected women terrorists.

Women were believed responsible for the bulk of the fire bombings that caused chaos in Belfast and three other Ulster towns this week.

Security for the ceremonies in Jerusalem was strict as Israeli security forces were still jittery from Thursday's terrorist attack by Arab guerrillas on a civilian housing complex near the Lebanese border which killed 18 Israelis.

Israeli soldiers armed with machine guns patrolled the Walled City's gates through which the 3,000 Christian pilgrims passed chanting prayers and singing hymns, stopping at each of the 14 stations where Jesus Christ is supposed to have rested en route to crucifixion hill.

Pope Paul, 76 and suffering from recurring influenza attacks, was ordered by his doctors to forego a liturgical service in St. Peter's Basilica but he refused to let down television viewers around the world for Friday evening's torch-lit Way of the Cross ceremony in a procession at the Roman Colosseum.

The pontiff also planned to go ahead with his Easter Sunday "urbi et orbi" (to the city and the world) message from the balcony above St. Peter's Square.

Open house set by Dominguez College

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Dominguez Hills State College will go on public display when the college holds its second annual open house April 28.

All of the 346-acre campus will be open to the public, including academic departments ranging from physical education to sociology to music.

"We're growing fast and we sense an increased community pride in our institution," said President Leo Cain.

Dominguez Hills, located in Carson, is one of the fastest-growing state colleges in the state.

The college started in a Palos Verdes Estates savings and loan building in 1965, then moved to a large apartment house complex across the street from its present site.

IT MOVED into the new site, on Victoria Avenue east of Avalon Boulevard, in 1968.

Since then, a five-story library, three-story school of natural sciences and mathematics and a three-story school of social and behavioral sciences have joined the initial cluster of one-story classroom buildings.

Construction will begin this summer on a 500-seat theater, a three-story school of humanities and fine arts, a health center and improved physical education facilities.

At open house, faculty from each of the college's 44 degree programs will be on hand to talk with persons seeking information.

But the various displays and programs for open house are planned to simply acquaint visitors with the college.

In the library patio, for example, theater students will be rehearsing a play, musicians will be giving concerts ranging from Bach to electronic synthesizer music, artists will be sculpting and painting and foreign language demonstrations will be underway.

In the natural sciences building, demonstrations will include laser beams, gravity, earthquake seismographs, ocean ecology and chemistry.

Historians in the social science building will take visitors on a tour through the local past; sociologists and psychologists will be displaying their testing labs and geographers will be talking about careers in the environmental sciences.

The school of education will be operating model classrooms and giving lessons on how children learn.

Competition on the athletic field will include the Toro baseball, rugby and karate teams in intercollegiate battle.

GUEST SPEAKERS will also be giving talks during Open House Week designed to interest the visiting public.

The school of natural sciences and mathematics is sponsoring talks by Dr. Bruce Murray, leader of the Mariner 10 television team which just photographed Venus and Mercury, and Dr. Roslyn Alfin-Slater, a nutritionist from the UCLA School of Medicine.

Dr. Alfin-Slater, professor of biological chemistry at UCLA, will speak on "Nutrition: Sense and Nonsense" on April 25 at 8 p.m. in the Library Theater.

She is a well-known advocate of nutritional common sense and has done extensive research in the areas of cholesterol absorption and Vitamin E metabolism.

Dr. Murray, professor of planetary science at Caltech, will speak on "The Voyage of the Mariner 10" on May 2 at 8 p.m., in the Library Theater.

He will answer questions about the recent Mariner fly-by which netted extensive pictures of both Venus and Mercury.

Admission to the two lectures is free.

Emergency housing Reopening of Beechhaven Lodge urged

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

A proposal to provide emergency housing for women and children and form families at Beechhaven Lodge, 834 Pacific Ave., will be presented Tuesday to the Long Beach City Council by United Way, Inc.

"We are aware of the lack of emergency shelter and an effective interagency referral plan for dealing with these hardships on a realistic basis," wrote H. E. Ridings Jr., board chairman, and Vaile G. Young, chairman of the Long Beach Advisory Council of United Way.

A study by the advisory council indicates there are 10 families or single women per night, representing a potential 27 persons, in need of emergency housing or related services, the letter said.

Beechhaven Lodge is owned by the Salvation Army. It was built in 1970-71 to provide shelter accommodations but, after a few months, a change in emergency funding policy forced it to close, and it has been closed for the past three years.

THE UNITED WAY proposal calls for joint financing of the emergency housing program by the City of Long Beach, County of Los Angeles and United Way. Annual contributions would be $8,500 each by city and county and $25,000 by United Way.

"Following commitment of financial resources to establish the program," Ridings and Young wrote, "a plan of implementation will be provided, including operational goals, financial and program accountability and the method for responsibly carrying out the assignment."

The program under consideration would provide shelter at Beechhaven Lodge and two meals per day on an emergency basis, the United Way letter said. It would include counseling and referral to assist the client in attempting long-term solutions to problems through existing voluntary and public services.

Ridings and Young said the program has been developed in cooperation with several local agencies and has been endorsed by City Manager John R. Mansell's staff and by County Supervisor James Hayes.

Expansion of Trailback hit

The controversy which has swirled around Trailback Lodge, 4151 Fountain St., for several years will be back before the Long Beach City Council on Tuesday in the form of a complaint that it is illegally expanding to the east.

The 40-bed lodge provides resident care and treatment for teen-age boys and girls who have drug-related emotional disturbances.

Mrs. Mary J. Ault, 1351 Bennett Ave., said property along the east side of the lodge and owned by Trailback is being cleared "to develop it into a recreational playground for use by the emotionally disturbed teen-agers at Trailback."

SHE URGED councilmen to halt the expansion. "There should come a time when some consideration is given by the city to those of us who have established our homes in this area under the mistaken assumption that we were protected by existing zoning ordinances," Mrs. Ault wrote.

She said it would be "relatively easy" to get signatures of all adjacent property owners on a petition of opposition, but that this would be time-consuming.

"It seems to me that the laws and regulations which govern the rest of us should at some point begin to apply to Trailback Lodge as well," she added.

The lodge operates under a special permit, partly in a residential and partly in a commercial area. The permit covers only the present area occupied by the lodge and its grounds.

"The residents of this area have neither been notified nor given any opportunity to protest" the alleged expansion, Mrs. Ault said.

Policewomen sue on sex bias in Torrance

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Six Torrance policewomen filed suit in federal court Friday to require the city to extend them equal treatment with male officers who are being reclassified as "police officers" instead of "policemen."

They contend the city is violating their rights under the 14th Amendment and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by requiring only female officers to take a qualification exam, including a physical agility test, in order to receive the reclassification. Even if they pass the exam, they must successfully complete a six-month probation period in the new classification.

Under recently adopted city ordinances, only personnel in the "police officer" category will be eligible for further advancement.

The six women officers — Rosa M. Wilson, Penny Koenig, Susan Rhilenger, Geraldine Kadokas, Pat Findley and Lois Reynolds — object to the automatic reclassification of male officers when the women are required to pass a qualifying exam.

The women claim that none of the men have ever been required to take a similar physical test. They also contend, "most of the former 'policemen', now 'police officers', would fail the physical agility and strength test if they were required to take it at the present time."

The whole question of equal treatment for male and female personnel came up more than two years ago when one of the women applied to take the examination for sergeant.

Officials ruled that she would not be eligible for the promotion since she did not have the required field duty time, but only male personnel were being assigned to field duty.

The new city ordinances were the best compromise solution which a committee of city councilmen could offer.

The women have no objection to the requirement for strength tests for any new personnel — male or female — who might later be hired, so their suit will affect only the seven present policewomen. One of them, however, declined to join as a plaintiff.

The suit seeks to enjoin the city from "discriminatory hiring practices concerning the City of Torrance Police Department, based on sex, and specifically be enjoined from failing and refusing to employ plaintiffs as 'police officers' without imposition of standards different from those applied to former 'policemen'."

No hearing date has yet been set in the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles where the suit was filed.

Waldie, Hafif team up on 'money candidates'

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press

Two Democratic candidates for governor teamed up Friday for a joint crusade against their common enemies—front runner Edmund G. Brown Jr. and everybody else with money for television commercials.

While Congressman Jerome Waldie and attorney Herb Hafif toured four California cities for joint anti-Brown news conferences, Brown was winning a court battle against another gubernatorial candidate, Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti.

Most other candidates in the June 4 gubernatorial race slowed their campaigning pace temporarily for the Easter holiday.

Hafif and Waldie—who have ranked fourth to seventh in various voter preference polls—accused Brown and the other candidates who lead them in the polls of raising war chests totaling $7 million for the June 4 Democratic primary.

They also challenged Brown to join them in a face-to-face debate next Thursday at UCLA.

"WE'VE got the thousands of people, and they've got the millions of dollars," said Hafif in a broadside attack against Brown, Moretti, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto and millionaire executive William Matsun Roth.

Waldie said each of those candidates will spend $500,000 or more on advertising during the next eight weeks, and complained: "The under-financed candidate rarely win an election."

"I don't find anything wrong with television commercials, but a campaign should be more than that," the Antioch congressman added.

Hafif, who has purchased numerous half-hour television spots for his own campaign, complained that the front-runners are spending their money on short image-producing short commercials, not in-depth discussions of issues.

"It's the kind of television that sells half-filled boxes of cereal. It's the 30-second spots. They're building the plastic shield of media advertising," Hafif said.

Moretti had filed suit against Brown in an attempt to get a letter by Brown, who is California's chief election officer, stricken from official voter pamphlets.

After Judge David A. Thomas of the Los Angeles County Superior Court rejected Moretti's suit, Brown issued a statement declaring that he had proved the suit was "nothing more than a cheap political ploy."

Moretti was on vacation and not immediately available for comment.

Brown, meanwhile, had an abbreviated Good Friday campaign schedule of appearances in Oakland and Berkeley.

Moretti scheduled his three-day vacation until the Legislature reconvenes Monday, and Alioto returned temporarily to business in the mayor's office before launching another week of dawn-to-dusk campaign trips next Monday.

In the Republican gubernatorial campaign, Controller Houston Flournoy scheduled a single speech before a Los Angeles County Republican women's club, while Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke vacationed following his arraignment in Washington Wednesday on a three-count Watergate Grand Jury perjury indictment.

State approves new master plan for migrant education

FRESNO (AP) — The State Board of Education unanimously approved a comprehensive new master plan for migrant education Friday.

But Dr. Leo R. Lopez, chief of the Bureau of Migrant Education, warned that implementing the program would be impossible without additional funds.

"We get $9 million from the federal government to fund our current program, which serves about 45,000 of the state's estimated 80,000 migrant children," Lopez said.

"If the state won't give us any money, what is the use of trying to extend the program to additional children?" he asked.

The State Department of Education has requested $4 million for the bureau's work in the 1975 budget. "If that money is approved, it will be the first money the state has ever spent on educating migrant children," Lopez said.

The new program will emphasize supplementary instruction, including bilingual tutors and resource teachers.

It will use "a pupil's primary language as the principal source of instruction, while at the same time...teaching him the language of the predominant culture." The vast majority of the migrant workers are Mexican-American and speak Spanish as their first language.

UNDER the plan, six regional offices will arrange health and dental services for migrant pupils, with medical and dental fees handled through the regional offices.

The plan will use the Migrant Student Record Transfer System from a data bank in Little Rock, Ark. The computer provides up-to-date information to any district on the migrant student's math and reading levels, along with any special health problems.

$2.44 TAX PROTEST COST GROWS, GROWS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — My, Morgan Pinney, quite contrary, how does your tax bill grow?

With assistance from the Internal Revenue Service, it grows in leaps and bounds, says Pinney.

It began as a mere $2.44 excise tax on Pinney's telephone bill, Pinney refused to pay it as a small gesture to oppose U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia.

Unimpressed, the IRS responded by towing away Pinney's pickup truck which he uses for his livelihood as a carpenter. The government intends to sell the vehicle within the next two weeks to recover the $2.44.

My, now look how Morgan Pinney's tax bill has grown!

To get his truck back, he must pay $12.50 for towing costs; $30.50 for daily storage, increasing at a rate of $3.50 a day; and $6 for legal fees.

In the past, the IRS would attach a protester's bank account for the amount owed for an unpaid excise tax. But this time, the IRS said it couldn't find Pinney's bank account and seized the truck.

The IRS said it gave Pinney numerous warnings.

But Pinney said Thursday he is baffled. He had performed the little protest for the past three years without incident.

Fourth quarter sales tax take netted Cal. record

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Business transactions subject to the California sales tax boomed along at the highest dollar volume in state history during the last three months of 1973, state officials said Friday.

Despite the energy crisis, taxable sales for the fourth quarter of last year were totaled nearly $17 billion, highest in history, the State Board of Equalization said in a news release.

The October, November and December total was up 11.7 per cent over the same period for the previous year, the board added.

For the full year of 1973, taxable sales were up nearly 15 per cent over 1972, the board said.

The board's report is a measure of dollar volume in sale of merchandise subject to the state sales tax.

The San Joaquin Valley and central coast counties led the state in taxable sales growth, up 17 per cent, the board said, while the San Francisco Bay Area was second with a 13.2 per cent for the last quarter of 1973.

Southern California gained 10.6 per cent during the three month period while Northern California jumped by 11.2 per cent.

The report had some grim news for California housewives fond of trading stamps.

"As 'discount' merchandising has become prevalent and service stations have acquired a sellers' market, trading stamps have almost disappeared," the report said.

Californians were also tucking away more money in savings with a jump of nearly 7 per cent in the rate of personal saving deposited during the last three months of 1973, the board report said.

The report called new car sales "spotty" during 1973.

"From the beginning of the year through midsummer, new car registrations and taxable sales of new car dealers recorded exceptional growth," the report said.

"Consumer preference has shifted rapidly to smaller vehicles which cost less to purchase and less to operate. New car dealers experienced some limitation in sales because they were unable to fill orders for the small models as demand for them outstripped supply, while the inventory of medium-sized and large expensive models piled up rapidly," the report said.

Wakefield loses his bid for first place on ballot

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court Friday denied a request from Assemblyman Floyd L. Wakefield, R-Downey, that he be placed first on the June primary ballot in Orange County and be listed as an "incumbent state assemblyman."

The court's order was without comment except that Justices Louis Burke and Stanley Mosk would have granted the petition.

Wakefield, who now represents the 52nd Assembly district and will seek the seat in the 70th district because of redistricting, had sought a stay of an Orange County Superior Court ruling.

He had contended he should be listed first among candidates for Assemblyman with the words "incumbent-state assemblyman" as his occupation.

The lower court had ruled he should be listed either as incumbent, state assemblyman, assemblyman 52nd district, or member of assembly 52nd district.

It also restrained the registrar from putting him first on the ballot and directed that all candidates be listed in alphabetical order.

Petroleum expert calls for new oil import system

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The United States should start a new oil import quota system to make it easy for members of the international oil monopoly to cheat on each other, says a world oil expert.

Such a policy could lead to the downfall of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), the cartel that has quadrupled the price of foreign oil in the past year, says Maurice A. Adelman, an economist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

But before this can happen, American foreign policy makers must acknowledge that the oil cartel is bad for American interests, says Adelman, whose views on OPEC often run opposite to fellow oil economists and Nixon administration policy.

OPEC is made up of 11 of the 12 biggest oil exporting countries in the world and controls more than two-thirds of the world's known oil reserves.

THE most important members are the Persian Gulf countries which include Saudi Arabia, the world's largest producer of oil after the United States. Also included in the membership are all the major Arab oil producing states which only recently lifted an embargo on oil shipments to the United States. Canada is not a member of OPEC.

The OPEC countries decide among themselves how much oil they will sell and how much they will charge for it. Their goal is to sell as much oil as possible without creating a surplus that would drive down prices, Adelman says.

"There is no question that oil imports into the United States are going to be limited" as the nation moves toward its goal of energy independence, says Adelman, a controversial, but widely respected authority on the international oil market.

"My suggestion is that we put this limit in the form of a quota and that we put parts of the quota up for sale by direct, sealed competitive bids," he says. "The higher the price, the more profitable it is to export oil into the United States."

"ANYONE with potential oil knows he can find a home for it in the U.S.A. All you require of a bidder is that he plunk down some good, hard cash" for oil selling licenses.

This system would magnify the tensions that already exist among OPEC countries, he says. Some of them want to sell as much oil as possible now so that they can invest the profits, while others want to hang onto their oil to keep prices up.

"This way, any government that wants to do some chiseling has a perfect vehicle for it," Adelman says. No country would know how much its colleagues were selling to the Americans, he says.

"This would shake the cartel," he says. "It means you cannot make any kind of agreement to keep the price at a certain level, because you can't control the people who are going to cheat."

"If it works well in the United States, other countries will try it, and that will be the end of the cartel. This would bring oil prices back down. How far, I don't know, but there's lots of room to go down."

THE price of oil produced by the cartel now hovers around $8 a barrel, and OPEC says this price will be maintained until June when it will meet again to consider adjustments.

There is no worldwide oil shortage, only a market artificially controlled by the cartel, Adelman says.

Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi "have a huge excess of potential production capacity which can be made into actual capacity in a relatively short time."

"Always the problem has been how do you keep up the price by containing this potential and not letting it become actual?"

And herein lie the seeds of disagreement that could lead to the cartel's downfall, Adelman says.

"There are some countries — Iran is the most important — with fairly sizable populations, water and natural resources who can put to very profitable use all of the revenues they can get, building the infrastructure of a civilized society," he says. "For every dollar they invest, they can probably get a return of 20 per cent a year if it's done sensibly."

"OTHER countries, such as Abu Dhabi, have to invest in the international financial market. They cannot hope to get any such high rate of return. Between those countries who want to make money as fast as possible and those who don't, there is a big difference of opinion."

The cartel is bad for American interests, because it vastly enriches the Arab nations and makes it easier for them to impose future embargoes, he says. It also makes a scramble for oil that creates hard feelings between the United States and its allies in Europe and Asia.

Adelman maintains that U.S. foreign policy is partially to blame for the current strength of OPEC. He says that because of fears in the 1950s that the Soviet Union would gain too much influence with Arab oil producing states, the United States embarked on a policy of Arab appeasement. One of the results of this policy was the development of a system whereby American oil companies can deduct from their U.S. income tax royalties paid on oil from OPEC countries. OPEC was founded in 1960 with the encouragement of the U.S. government, Adelman says.

ADELMAN'S view that OPEC should be actively opposed by the United States and other oil consuming countries has been heavily criticized by some of his fellow economists. The Nixon administration itself seems disinclined to take an adversary posture against OPEC. The U.S. oil import quota law, in effect since the Eisenhower administration, was lifted last year by the President as oil shortages began to appear. There have been no indications that the quotas will be reinstated in the near future.

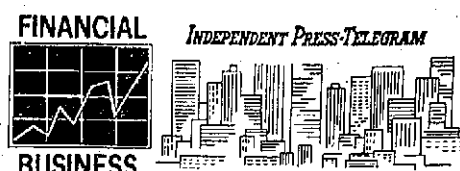

The Nixon administration has called for consuming country unity in the face of OPEC price increases, but with little success. The American government has repeatedly warned its European allies not to make country-to-country deals for oil. But several European countries are in the midst of negotiating separate deals for oil with OPEC countries.

ASKED about administration policy on OPEC, Federal energy chief William E. Simon said: "We don't comment on OPEC publicly. We think that the producing (OPEC) nations realize that a low price is essential in maximizing profits. This is a compelling economic argument."

Critics say that if Adelman's sealed bid quota system were initiated, OPEC's reaction might well be to shut off the oil. But even if OPEC didn't do that, it would still be able to figure out the prices being paid since sealed bids are no guarantee of secrecy.

Import sales also hit by energy crisis

DETROIT (AP) — Small-car imports, which were expected to profit handsomely from this year's domestic auto sales downslide, are mired in a slump of their own.

Import sales during March were down 27 per cent from March 1973 — little better than the 29.6 per cent decline of U.S. autos. For the first three months of 1974, import sales were off 20 per cent, compared to 27.4 per cent for domestic makers.

About the only cheery note in an otherwise gloomy quarter for the importers is that their share of the U.S. market increased from 15.7 per cent last year to 17.2 per cent.

AUTO industry observers had expected the imports, specialists in the small-car market, to capitalize on the unprecedented consumer switch away from big cars because of uncertainties over the economy and fuel availability.

However, a combination of factors, including rising costs, short supplies and deflated used car prices have forced a revision of those optimistic forecasts.

"The energy crisis hurt everybody and it's still affecting us," said a spokesman for Volkswagen of America, the nation's largest importer. Volkswagen sales are down 33.5 per cent for March and 28.6 per cent for the quarter.

The spokesman said sales were hurt by short supplies earlier this year because of delays in meeting federal antipollution standards.

ANOTHER problem is below-normal used car values.

"People can't afford to trade in a two-year-old Oldsmobile at the low prices they're getting," the spokesman said.

March sales of Japan's three largest imports — Toyota, Datsun and Mazda — were down substantially from March 1973, ranging from a 53 per cent decline for the rotary-engine Mazda to a 22 per cent slump for Toyota.

In sharp contrast, however, another Japanese product, the Honda Civic, bucked the industry trend during the first quarter by tripling 1973 sales to 11,905, moving ahead of Volvo to become No. 8 in the import sweepstakes.

First introduced in the United States on a limited basis last year, Honda received the federal Environmental Protection Agency's highest gas mileage rating.

A spokesman for Toyota said he expects sales to pick up soon. But a threatened Japanese seamen's strike could turn April into another gloomy sales period for that country's car makers.

"WE are making every effort to improve our supply," said Robert O. Link, sales vice president of Nissan Motor Corp. in U.S.A., which imports the Datsun. "However, facing pending strikes in Japan that will affect shipping, we do not see a great deal of immediate relief."

Warren Christell, distribution and planning manager for Toyota, said his firm's sales decline was brought on by a short supply early this year because of record sales during 1973.

"A lot of people are wondering if they're going to have a job next week, so they're deferring purchases," Christell said. "But I think there will be a real strengthening in demand this summer."

Mazda's problems are somewhat unique. After doubling sales for three years in a row, the rotary-driven car entered a sales nose dive this year because of a disputed federal report that the little import gets only 10 to 11 miles to the gallon.

THE imports, once sought for their low sticker prices, also have been hurt by inflation, rising costs and the U.S. dollar's devaluation, which have sent retail prices soaring above domestic subcompacts.

The Volkswagen Beetle, which sold for $1,780 in 1971, now retails for $2,625, nearly $200 more than Ford's subcompact Pinto and $250 more than Chevrolet's Vega.

A two-door Toyota Corolla 1600 retails for $2,669 and a two-door Datsun costs $2,579.

A FORD spokesman said Big Three import sales have been hurt mainly by dramatic increases in retail prices, in some cases as much as 40 per cent within a year.

The sticker price on an Opel has gone up 27 per cent since last year to $3,275, and the Capri now costs $3,566, compared to $2,528 early in 1973.

Besides Honda, the only other imports to register slight first-quarter sales gains over 1973 were Fiat, Audi, Subaru, Renault, Peugeot and Alfa Romeo.

Home to build in Lakewood

Details of Home Savings and Loan Association's new Lakewood facility were announced this week.

The six-story building, on 2.8 acres at 4909 Lakewood Blvd., will be graced with an acre of landscaping, including walkways and two sculpture pools.

Construction is scheduled to begin this summer and business will continue at the site in a temporary facility.

Ground floor of the new building will have 20 teller windows and 12 new account desks. Lending and escrow facilities will occupy the second floor.

The top four floors, with 30,000 square feet, are available for lease. Two high speed elevators will serve tenants.

The Lakewood branch opened at the site in 1960 and has grown to $178 million in savings accounts.

Manager is Gilbert Peterson; loan officer, Sheldon Deane.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Needed: energy corps

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is setting up an Energy Corps similar to the Peace Corps.

Its young members will go into areas that still have primitive conservation practices and teach the people modern ways of saving energy.

Suburban areas are particularly backward in this regard. In the subdivision where I live, for example, many of the children have never been taught to turn off electric lights.

It is shocking and shameful that the last third of the 20th Century should find American youths lacking in such basic skills. But there is no point in trying to hide the deplorable facts.

Insofar as I can determine from talking with my neighbors, most adult suburbanites have the ability to operate an "off" switch. Or did at one time.

But because of various sociological and economic factors, they have failed to impart this aptitude to their children.

You can see young people going from room to room, turning on the lights as they enter, but unable to turn them off as they leave.

THE breakdown of proficiency in this field also is apparent in their inability to turn off television sets, tape recorders, radios and record players.

The tragedy, according to leading anthropologists, is that within two generations the capability of turning off electric appliances could entirely disappear.

Once switched on, lamps, electric toothbrushes, hot lather machines and other devices would continue to run until their bulbs, tubes, rheostats or whatever finally burned out.

There is even doubt that, once the art is lost, future generations of suburbanites would even be able to blow out candles.

This is what makes formation of the Energy Corps such an important step.

BY GOING into suburban areas and actually living among the people, thereby gaining their trust and confidence, dedicated corpsmen may be able to reverse the trend. If it isn't already

The board of directors of Home Bank announced appointment of Ray A. Elston as president and chief executive officer. He had been executive vice president eight years. He lives in Seal Beach.

James A. Benson of Long Beach, whose banking career in the Long Beach-Orange County area covers 27 years, has been appointed vice president of Home Bank's Signal Hill office.

Great Western Savings and Loan Association has named Robert Cripe, of Torrance, vice president and district manager of the Bellflower office.

Garden Grove resident Russell B. Farrar has been promoted to assistant vice president at Bank of America's Southern California headquarters. He is a 33-year veteran with the bank.

Election of L. P. Juckett, Buena Park, to a senior vice president of United California Bank has been announced. He joined the bank in 1948.

John T. Quick, administrator of the Long Beach District Board of Equalization office, has retired after a 33-year career.

Charles Love Jr., who joined Dow Chemical U.S.A. in 1953, has been named assistant manager of its Torrance production plant.

Long Beach resident Regina Roberts, assistant manager with Security Pacific Bank, has been transferred from bank's central division to become assistant manager at Hill and Atlantic branch.

Investing avenues sought

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Inflation and devaluation of the dollar have caused Americans to look around for new avenues of safe investment.

Some have turned to art objects, gold coins and precious stones.

Most of the nation's jewelers have reported an increase in their sales of investment gems — diamonds, emeralds, rubies and sapphires.

But it isn't as simple and sure-fire as it might sound.

Arthur F. Gleim, president of the American Gem Society and operator of three jewelry stores in the Palo Alto, Calif., area, is sounding a warning for the inexperienced and unwary.

Such an investment is not for everyone but for the very few, he says. Reports from the 2,500 retail jewelers who belong to the society, which has its headquarters in Los Angeles, show they believe that gems as a financial investment are for those who can afford to deal in largesums of money. For 99 per cent of all investors and customers in general, gems are investment in pleasure, they say.

THE society says basic arithmetic is the main reason why gems should be avoided as a financial investment: The buyer makes his purchase at retail and pays the jeweler a profit. But when the individual is ready to sell, it is almost impossible for him to get the same retail price level. He must settle, generally, for selling at the wholesale level. And, even then, it may be very difficult to find a buyer.

Small businesses said oppressed

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) "We have condoned and inadvertently encouraged the manipulation of the national economy for the benefit of the big, and at the expense of the small," the writers of the document declared.

Piety words recalled uprisings of the oppressed, with frequent references to vital decisions made by "a handful of faceless but powerful men," the "infiltration of government agencies," and "trading seats of management between big business and big government."

"What has been proposed," conceded the head of the group that prepared the document, "is revolutionary." His name: Ken Anderson, an Illinois businessman and president of the National Small Business Association.

THE association, which promotes itself as "the voice of small business," doesn't as effectively spell out its interpretation of what makes a small business, but it does offer guidelines, such as:

—A small business usually has fewer than 500 employees, a big business more than 5,000.

—A small business usually is a proprietorship, partnership or closely held corporation; a big business is usually publicly owned, listed on a stock exchange or traded in the over-the-counter market.

According to the NSB, small business is oppressed not only by government and labor, but by big business. "General Motors and Smith's Machine Shop are not the same!" it snaps.

IN A presentation to members of Congress, the group called for adoption of a national policy to restore to small business

Authors speak out

THE GREAT MERCHANTS, by Tom Mahoney. Harper & Row, $8.95.

Ever wonder just who ignited the spark that zoomed such companies as J. C. Penny; Sears, Roebuck and F. W. Woolworth into gigantic successes?

Mahoney, business writer and former reporter for Fortune, with Leonard Sloane, now on the business news staff of The New York Times and formerly a reporter on The Wall Street Journal, write about 26 such American retailing "institutions," including the big food retailers such as A&P and Safeway.

The authors describe the people who ignited the spark in each company.

The pages are full of anecdotes about the founders; the reader learns how they lived, but more importantly how they worked, what happened to the company, and who runs it today (and how). Facts and figures are given.

In this completely revised and updated edition the authors include, for the first time, the story of Bergdorf Goodman and Broadway-Hale. Mahoney and Sloane also discuss the retailing trade in the year 2000 and later, alerting the reader to what is being projected for the millennium. —RLB

Economic rise seen by 1975

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Argus Research Corp. foresees a resumption of economic growth in the world's industrialized nations by 1975 even if petroleum prices remain at their current record levels.

"The world economy is now in the midst of an economic slowdown, part of which was caused by the sudden shift in oil prices," Argus said in its latest report. "But the weaknesses in production and employment will be limited."

"Most major industrial countries will be growing again—briskly in some cases—by the final quarter of 1974 or the first quarter of 1975, in spite of high oil prices," it said.

Even if the oil embargo is lifted soon and petroleum prices decline significantly, Blyth Eastman Dillon and Co. believes that "a mild and short-lived recession lies ahead with growth of real GNP about 1 per cent in 1974 and profits down about 5 per cent."

Patty urged to show proof of SLA allegiance

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—An international revolutionary leader urged Patricia Hearst Friday to produce indisputable proof that she has joined the Symbionese Liberation Army of her own free will.

Regis Debray, a French intellectual widely admired among leftwing activists, made the plea in a letter mailed from Paris to Miss Hearst's fiancé, Steven Weed.

Debray said Miss Hearst could "find a way to deliver" irrefutable proof to an anonymous intermediary—who could be any common friend of herself and Weed.

When Miss Hearst, 20, was dragged from her apartment by abductors Feb. 4, Weed was badly beaten and left behind. Last week she said in a tape-recorded message that she had joined the Symbionese Liberation Army and would not return to her former way of life.

The Hearst family and Weed expressed grave doubts that Miss Hearst was speaking free of coercion.

Weed said he asked for a message from Debray because his name carries great prestige with the worldwide leftwing movement. Debray was a comrade of the late Che Guevara, the famed revolutionary killed in Bolivia in 1967.

Debray's letter, written in French, was addressed "To Patricia Hearst", and noted that she wanted henceforth to be known as Tania—the name by which Haidee Tamara Bunke, an associate of Guevara's also killed in Bolivia, was known. Debray said the name "is an integral part of our revolutionary patrimony."

Debray said his purpose was to clear up ambiguity and relieve friends' anguish, and said, "I ask you only to assure me that you have consciously and freely chosen to take the name and follow the example of Tania."

The letter said "Tania's comrade could not accept anybody's using the name: dishonestly and cynically, without your agreement," so as to disfigure the memory of the original Tania.

"You will find a way to deliver to an anonymous intermediary without needless publicity, irrefutable proof of your free and conscious choice. This intermediary can be any common friend of Steve and you."

The letter concluded, "Good luck, Patricia." Weed, 26, a University of California philosophy student, proposed Thursday night that the Symbionese Liberation Army be allowed to fly Miss Hearst to a foreign country where communication could be established.

He said he has been working on the plan for several weeks, and that it has been discussed by the Hearst family. However, the FBI agent in charge of the case said he knew none of the details and declined comment.

Miss Hearst's father, Randolph, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner and her mother, Catherine, flew earlier this week for a vacation rest at Las Cruces, an exclusive resort near La Paz, Mexico.

Patty, parents 'visits' forecast

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Dennis Banks, a leader of the American Indian Movement (AIM), reported Friday that his contacts regarding the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst have convinced him that "meaningful visits" will be arranged between Miss Hearst and her parents.

Banks said, however, he has had no direct contact with those who kidnaped Miss Hearst Feb. 4. He said his contacts with members of a newly formed coalition of minority groups make him believe the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) will allow Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Hearst to talk with their daughter.

BANKS IS a codefendant in the Wounded Knee trial at U.S. District Court at St. Paul. The charges against Banks and Russell Means are an outgrowth of the 71-day occupation of Wounded Knee, S.D., for 71 days last year.

Banks said that AIM will no longer play a direct role in attempting to arrange for the release of Miss Hearst. AIM was one of the minority groups that became involved in planning of free food distribution demanded by the kidnapers.

Banks said at a press conference that the new coalition involves "politicians of all levels, members of community groups, and clergy in an effort to act upon those very serious issues SLA has raised."

The future communications in connection with the kidnapping, said Banks, will be handled by a group called the Free Form Media, headquartered in Santa Cruz.

"Any visits between Miss Hearst and her parents should probably take place outside this country," Banks said.

Asked if he felt that the 20-year-old kidnap victim was alive and well, Banks said: "We've never had any reason to believe she is dead."

He added that "AIM is available for any kind of consultation with the new coalition," but does not plan any direct role in negotiations to free the newspaper heiress.

Anticrime pilot projects urged

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—Declaring no one knows why crime is on the rise or what to do about it, Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe Friday called for diverting "a big chunk" of federal money into pilot projects to find the answers.

"The simple fact is that we don't know the reason—no one does," Saxbe said in a speech prepared for a big gathering of business and civic leaders honoring Saxbe at a testimonial dinner here.

"Your opinion is just about as good as anyone else's," Saxbe said. "And that itself is a major problem. If you don't know what causes crime how are you going to reduce it?"

Saxbe said the way to get the answers is to start federally funded pilot projects to discover experimentally what works and what does not.

Saxbe proposed obtaining the needed money by diverting it from the grants that state and local law enforcement agencies now receive from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), which has nearly a $1 billion budget.

The LEAA grants are intended to help finance local crime fighting, but Saxbe commented, "If we don't know how to spend that money to reduce crime, how do they know?"

"It's not politic to say this and I'll be criticized for it but I think more of that money ought to go into pilot programs. I think we ought to take a big chunk of it and make some hard choices as to the kind of pilot programs we want to try out and then get them into operation—and fast."

"Just for a starter," he said, "how do you deal with a terrorist?"

Saxbe fears this new form of criminal activity is "going to get worse." He said just using a common sense approach may not work because "the people you are dealing with may not be rational—they can be highly irrational fanatics."

Woman, horse go over cliff

United Press International A Hollywood woman and the horse she was riding tumbled down a cliff in Griffith Park Friday when the horse apparently bolted.

City firemen rescued Doris Oliver, 48, from a ledge 40 feet down the cliff. She was listed in good condition at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital. The horse fell 200 feet to its death.

The woman was riding along the lower Beacon Trail near Coolidge Golf Course when the accident occurred.

$256,000 mescaline lab seized

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Federal agents said Friday they had seized the only mescaline laboratory ever uncovered in this area in a raid in Marin County.

Robert DeFauw, in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration here, said the laboratory in a San Rafael warehouse complex was capable of producing 32,000 doses a week of the peyote-based hallucinogenic, worth $256,000 at retail.

DeFauw said Aloysius G. Juadakis, 36, Mill Valley, was arrested during the Thursday night raid and charged with manufacturing a controlled substance.

"It was the first mescaline laboratory we have ever seized in this area," said DeFauw, "and it's one of the largest and most sophisticated labs we've ever encountered."

Record romp: Angels rout Chisox, 15-1

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Question: When was the last time the Angels scored 15 runs at Anaheim Stadium?

Answer: Friday night. It was also the first time that the Angels have been so prolific at home since moving to Orange County in 1968.

Some sinister forces must be at work at the Big A.

After routing the bumbling, fumbling Chicago White Sox, 15-1, Friday the Angels can now lay claim to having scored 26 runs and having amassed 31 hits in two games.

"We must be a hard-hitting team," mused manager Bobby Winkles.

ANGEL OF DAY
FRANK ROBINSON homered and singled twice, driving in three runs as Angels slaughtered White Sox, 15-1.

scratching his jaw in contentment as the Angels made it five wins in six tries and sent the inept Sox down to fifth successive setback.

"When was the last time this team scored 28 runs in two games?" he asked.

That sent historians scurrying to the record book and they were, still searching as of midnight. On a night when they didn't need too much help from the enemy, the Angels received it anyway.

Inspired, if that's the word, by third baseman Bill Melton, the Sox conspired to litter the diamond with six errors. Melton had three by himself. He also accounted for the lone Sox run with a fourth-inning homer.

Hitters abounded for the Angels.

Frank Robinson collected his second home run in as many games and added two singles while driving in three runs. Dave Chalk, the rookie shortstop, broke out of an 0-for-17 drought with three hits and three RBI. Lee Stanton stretched his hitting streak to seven games with a double and single and Mickey Rivers gathered two hits and chased across three more.

But the most satisfying aspect of the evening was the effort offered by Nolan Ryan. He was more the Ryan Angel supporters grew to admire last year.

He shrugged off the wildness which had prompted him to walk 15 batters in nine innings in his first two starts and stood the Sox on their collective ears with a five-hitter over eight innings.

"I guess I'm about 80 per cent of the real me," he said afterward, revealing for the first time that he has been bothered by a pulled back muscle suffered while throwing batting practice at Riverside in the final spring game.

"I haven't been spreading that word around," Ryan said. That's typical Nolan. He's not one to offer excuses.

Ryan said he helped correct his control by viewing a videotape of his no-hitter at Detroit last

Jack 3 back; 'Course is ready to be taken'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — He's a scrambler, a spoiler and a scrapper and he's the thunderclap that snapped the 38th Masters Golf Tournament out of its 48 hours of lethargy.

"I don't remind anybody of Ben Hogan," says Dave Stockton, "but I get the job done. Nobody wants to play Jack Nicklaus head-to-head but I like the idea of trying to beat him here, where he owns the air."

"He has beaten up on us so long, it would be nice to get even."

Dan Sikes, the non-practicing Jacksonville, Fla., attorney who was paired with Nicklaus an matched him stroke for stroke, predicted: "It looks like Jack is ready to be tough."

The least concerned seemed to be Stockton, a University of Southern California graduate who has been on the tour 10 years and whose greatest moment in golf was winning the PGA in 1970.

"If I'm putting I can putt with anybody," Stockton said, commenting on his peculiar round which included frequent forays into Augusta's jungles but only 26 putts.

STOCKTON is not brazenly brash but is a fierce competitor who seems to thrive on an adversary position.

Osteen meets, beats former teammates, 5-3

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

HOUSTON — Lee May, slugging first baseman of the Houston Astros, was comparing the pitchers, the Dodgers' Al Downing and Claude Osteen, the long-time Dodger who came up to Texas over the winter, following Friday's game.

"Those two," said May, "are like scientists. They are a lot alike. Perfectionists. Or maybe they're engineers. That's the way they pitch, anyway."

May, who preceded Osteen to Houston by two summers, defied science himself Friday.

HIS THREE-RUN home run off Downing in the sixth inning provided the decisive blow in Houston's 5-3 victory.

The homer came before 26,422 fans in the Astros' home opener. It was hit in the Astrodome, a stadium which does little for hitters, either with its vast dimensions or lack of wind.

"But the wind must have been blowing," May said with a snicker, "cause I didn't think that ball was going out."

It will no doubt send at least one of the scientists — Downing — back to the test tubes.

"It was a mistake I hit," May said. "He tried to turn one over and it didn't turn. I think it's the first mistake he's made against me in three years."

FOR OSTEEN, it was his first confrontation with his former mates and he expressed the expected anxiety.

"There were some anxious moments," he admitted. "I faced the Dodgers once in the spring but it's different now that it counts."

"I guess I took a little extra peek at Jim Wynn, too," he added, mentioning the man for whom he was traded. "I can't say that I didn't pitch him a little tougher. I know he's off to a fast start and I'm conscious of all the Dodgers' baserunning, too. Yeh, I guess I was looking him over pretty closely when he got out to second base."

It was in the sixth inning, the only time on base for Wynn, who said DODGER OF DAY STEVE GARVEY doubled twice and singled in 5-3 loss to Astros.

on Sunday. "I want to destroy those guys." He was aboard with a walk.

The score was tied at the time, 1-1, and Wynn was at second base with only one out. He eventually scored on a single by Ron Cey. Steve Garvey followed with his second double of the night and Bill Russell was walked to load the bases. Osteen got out of it by striking out Downing.

"He made some mistakes, too," said May of his new teammate, "But Osteen pitched awfully well when he got into a jam."

In the home half of the sixth, May's two-out, two-run homer shattered Downing as well as the Dodgers. It was a mammoth blow, to right-centerfield.

"I had a bad spring and it carried into the season," May said, "but the last couple of days I've been swinging real good."

It was May's first homer of the year but not his first against the Dodgers. It was his 24th against them which ties him for third place among active National Leaguers.

"I guess I have hit a few against the Dodgers he said. "I remember a three-run homer off Osteen last year to win a game, and I hit a grand

DAVE STOCKTON... 'Confident'

GRAHAM MARSH... 8 shots back

BEFORE STOCKTON scrambled in near the end of the day Friday with his spectacular round—bouncing the ball off trees, slamming out of constant trouble and fending off disaster with a blast-hot putter—everyone was decrying the fact that no player was making a move.

"So many of us are playing head-to-head, nobody is springing out in front," Irwin said. "There's nobody out there to chase."

Nicklaus, shooting for his fifth Masters crown, quickly agreed.

"If somebody shot real well," Jack said, "the others would follow. The course is sitting out there, ready to be taken."

Most of the players and the other observers felt that Big Jack was the man to do it in the closing rounds today and Sunday. Although he has played two rather mediocre rounds—for Nicklaus—the blond bombardier was only three shots off the pace after a 71.

Nicklaus was alternately pleased and displeased with his game.

"I like to feel that I'm building as a tournament progresses," Nicklaus said, "that's why I'm disappointed about shooting 71."

Nicklaus thought he Knicks to a 91-81 victory over the Bullets Friday night in the seventh game of their opening round NBA playoff series.

The Celtics now meet the Celtics in Boston Sunday afternoon in the opener of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals.

The Knick defense in the second half was the telling phase of the game as they limited the Bullets to 30 points, 10 in the third quarter and 20 in the fourth period.

New York only scored 16 points in the third quarter but Monroe tallied half of that total as the Knicks raised a 53-51 halftime margin to 69-61 entering the last period.

Capital refused to fold, however, as the Bullets twice closed to within four points. Archie Clark's basket with four minutes to go left Capital trailing 81-77 and the Bullets lost a chance to close the gap further when Phil Chenier missed two free throws with 2:34 to go.

CAPITAL (81): Hayes 5 2-12, Rorand 4 2-10, Unsold 0 0-2, Chenier 7 7-12, Porter 3 0-0, Clark 6 1-12, Kozelko 8 3-19, Weatherspoon 0 0-0. Totals 81-51.

No time left, Celtics win

BUFFALO (UPI)—Jo Jo White, fouled as time ran out by Bob McAdoo, hit two free throws to lift Boston to a 106-104 victory over the Buffalo Braves Friday night and give the Celtics the clinching game in the best-of-seven first-round National Basketball Assn. playoffs.

White, who had three attempts to make two, missed the first free throw, but hit the next two and the Celtics won the series four games to two.

It was a bitter ending for the scrappy Braves. McAdoo had blocked John Havlicek's 12-foot jumper just before Darrell Garretson called him for hacking White.

McAdoo, who scored 26 of his game high 40 points in the second half and 14 in the final period, had pulled the Braves into a 104-104 with seven seconds left when he stole Don Nelson's inbound pass out of the hands of Dave Cowens at midcourt and steamed in to stuff it.

Shortly after the game, the Braves announced they were considering a protest as a record 18,257 fans screamed their displeasure and tossed garbage at the floor. The Braves claimed that there still was one second left on the clock after White's clinching points.

BOSTON (106): Havlicek 12 4-20, Nelson 3 1-2, Cowens 7 1-15, White 8 2-16, Chinery 6 1-2, Williams 1 0-2, Siliak 6 4-16, Weatherspoon 7 2-16. Totals 106-104.

Tulsa, Okla., he made himself unpopular by beating out Arnold Palmer, who still has not won the PGA.

Going down the stretch, Dave's ears rang with the cries of Arnie's Army: "Go, Arnie, Go!"

Stockton got fed up and turned to one yelling, stampeding group and said: "Arnie ain't going anywhere."

In this year's Los Angeles Open at Riviera, Stockton and the 61-year-old Sam Snead were fighting head-to-head down the stretch with the crowd pulling heavily for the old warrior in the coconut straw.

On the 17th, Snead remarked to Stockton: "In 1950, I made birdies on the last two holes here to beat Ben Hogan."

Stockton was stunned. He said he wanted to retort, "That's old history," but he kept his tongue. On the final hole Stockton made one of the greatest shots of his career to win the tournament.

STOCKTON learned his game from his father, a former pro, and kids about his driving style. "I fall off the tee while making impact," he says.

Klecker hurls in tournament

Ed Klecker, voted the top pitcher at the ISC world tournament last year, hurls for the Stevenson-Forster Lake-wood Jets tonight against San Bernardino Manny's in the Western Softball Congress Round-Robin Tournament at Mayfair Park.

These teams won their opening tournament games and will square off in the 6:30 opener. Mission Viejo and the Greater Lakewood Barons play at 8:30. WSC action begins Friday night with the Jets facing the Long Beach Nitehawks.

L.B. bowling in third week

Competition resumes today in the 27th Long Beach Bowling Assn. city tournament at Plaza Lanes, 6425 E. Spring Street in Long Beach.

Only one team event squad is scheduled today — at 6:30 p.m. — as the seven-week, $12,000 tournament enters its third weekend of action. Doubles and singles squads compete Sunday at 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m., to be followed by a mixed team squad at 4:30 p.m.

The final team event squads of the 10th Long Beach Junior Bowling Assn. city tournament compete today at 9:30 a.m. and noon at Cove Lanes in Wilmington. Singles and doubles action begins next Saturday and continues until the tournament ends April 28.

Jipcho will be favored in the mile. The 1973 world track and field athlete of the year has been beaten only once since playing for pay, but the lanky lad who administered that defeat, Chris Fisher of Australia, will be aiming at him again today.

Other matchups, Olympian against Olympian, include Steve Smith-Bob Seagren in the pole vault, John Carlos, Jimmy Hines and Jean-Louis Ravellomanantsoa in the 60, and Larry James, Lee Evans, John Smith and Vince Matthews in the 500.

"Run for fun" events include a 40 for football receivers, bringing together er Bob Hayes, Harold Jackson, Cliff Brance and Isaac Curtis, and a 40' for-backs, with James McAlister, Lawrence McCutcheon, Clarence Davis and Greg Pruitt.

Sen. Alan Cranston, George Rhoden, Payton Jordan and Mal Andrews race in a masters' 60. Brian Oldfield runs against Barbara Ferrell in the 400-meter 60, and Chuck LaBenz-Wottle, each running an 880, tangle with Mable and Willa Mae Ferguson, Ferrell and Lacey O'Neill, each dashing a 440, in a sexist mile.

Competition will commence at 1:40 p.m. Tickets will be on sale at the gates.

'Iron Man' recalls how it used to be with Arnie

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) —

He is a sad, lonely figure who sits in the shadows of golf's great spring extravaganza and remembers the days when he was perhaps the most famous caddy in the world.

"I ain't got nothing now," Nathaniel Avery, the renowned Iron Man who toted Arnold Palmer's bags to four Masters championships, lamented Friday. "I've had no action since 1971. I got a job this year carrying a photographer's equipment. Then they fired me — said I was too slow."

Iron Man, 35, a lean rope of a man with just a trace of a mustache and a goatee, wears the Masters caddy uniform — white, green-trimmed coveralls — but there's no number on the back.

The bags all have gone to other men.

Benny Hatcher now is Arnie's assistant in the field. Jack Nicklaus' caddy is plump Willie Peterson, who boasts, "I got me an annuity." "I got no grudges, Benny is a good friend of mine," Iron Man said, letting his eyes wander over the Augusta National landscape with its milling golfers and excited spectators.

"But no man knows this course like me. I know every tree, every blade of grass, every break on the greens. Arnie will be lucky to make the cut. He's having his problems. He'll never make a comeback until he gets me back — you just watch and see."

Nobody, outside of the principals themselves, knows what caused the break. But for 14 years Palmer and the Iron Man were the most famous combination in golf.

"I got the bag in 1954," the gaunt Augusta native recalled. "At that time Palmer was still an amateur and nobody thought much of him. The real heat was Ken Venturi, Mike Souchak and Gene Littler."

"The caddy master came down to the lot and said, 'If you take this bag, you got to keep it.' I said, 'I'll keep it.' Everybody wanted Venturi's bag, or Littler's."

Iron Man carried Arnold's bag for the next 14 years, an era in which Palmer won four Masters and sent the sport into orbit with his miracle finishes. It was here that Arnie's Army and the name "Iron Man" were born.

"Charlie Boy, who was also called Mutt, gave me that name," Iron Man said, "cause I was like an iron man on the course." As Palmer's fame rose, so rose Iron Man's. He was interviewed and photographed almost as much as his boss.

"We're a corporation, we're a team," Iron Man had boasted. But some people say Palmer became piqued by Avery's attempt to horn in on the act.

Kings try home atmosphere

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Familiar ice and friendly fans — perhaps a sellout — will be on the Kings' side when they return to the Forum at 8 tonight.

Dan Maloney thinks it will help them get even in their Stanley Cup quarter-final after 3-1 and 4-1 losses in Chicago.

Goalie Rogation Vachon isn't so sure.

"It should help," says Maloney, "no doubt about it. We didn't win any games in Chicago, but we showed that it wouldn't be a cakewalk. We'll see what the home advantage will do for us."

Vachon says, "There is no home ice in the playoffs. Everybody's saying we'll come home and everything will be all right. But there will be more pressure on us than before. Now we have to win these two."

The fourth game is scheduled Sunday night at 7, and talk around Chicago is that the Black Hawks will be returning to the Windy City alone to await the winner of the Boston-Toronto set.

The projection is plausible, since no expansion team ever has won more than two games in a best-of-seven series with one of the original six National Hockey League clubs. The record reads six wins and 40 losses, and six of the sets were 4-0 shutouts.

King coach Bob Pulford is doing everything within his power to avert a rout. He checked his players into a Los Angeles hotel at 10:30 Friday night after brief visits with their families, and they'll return to the same lodgings after tonight's match.

"They get a better night's rest that way," Pulford reasons.

Maloney, whose muscle-flexing provided a distracting influence until a shoulder injury shelved him a month ago, could be the pivotal player in a King turnaround.

"We're playing our game," says the veteran left wing, who came to the Kings from the Black Hawks. "We're working just as hard as before. We're not holding back. We have several guys that haven't been through it (the playoffs) before, but after each game they're that much older and wiser."

"But we've got to beat (goalie Tony) Esposito. We've had good shots on him but he really closes the door. We've got to get in quicker for the rebounds... be more aggressive."

"Nobody has to worry about being pushed around. I feel we're out-checking them and out-skating them. They've got a little more polish."

The rivals agree that the goaltending has been a standoff.

"Rogie's played just super," says Maloney.

Stan Mikita says, "He's robbed me about three times."

LBSU basketball team 'figures' near the top

Often virtually overlooked in national polls, Long Beach State can at least use NCAA statistics to support the contention that it had one of the best basketball teams in the nation last year.

The 49ers, who were 2-2 under Lute Olson, are listed in five of the NCAA's seven team statistical categories and in some instances rank ahead of national champion North Carolina State.

The 49ers were second in the nation, behind Notre Dame (.530) in field goal percentage at .528; third, back of UNC Charlotte (.20.8) and UCLA (.19.6), in average winning margin at 19.1; and third in won-lost percentage (.923) following North Carolina State (.968) and UMD, Eastern Shore (.931).

Long Beach was eighth in team defense (.61.1) and 14th in rebounding margin (8.1).

The only individual members of the team to receive recognition were seniors Leonard Gray and Glenn McDonald. Gray (174 of 296, .588) and McDonald (155 of 275, .564), ranked 13th and 22nd in field goal percentage.

THE SPORTS TIME MACHINE

By Dave Brace and Tim Simmons

CHARLIE PADDOCK, with hands high, leaps through wire to win 100-meter dash in 10. 4/5 at Antwerp Olympics, proving his nickname of The World's Fastest Human is accurate.

ANTWERP, 1970

Of all the cities in the world, Antwerp would seem to be one of the most unlikely locations to host the 1970 Olympics. Totally devastated by the "Great War," the Belgians worked frantically admirably to prepare for the Games.

The Germans and Austrians are conspicuously uninvited and unrepresented in the capital of their wartime enemy. The Americans are here, 300 strong.

Most of those 300 have been on the verge of revolt ever since the team sailed from New York on a converted troopship, the S.S. Princess Matoika. The conditions of the ship, and housing in Antwerp, have caused a severe drop in morale.

On the first day of competition, the American team finds out that there is more to contend with than the poor conditions. It's the Finns.

Finland sweeps the javelin throw with all three medalists breaking the world record.

The second day Frank Loomis wins a gold medal by winning the 400 meter hurdles in world record time and his teammate, Charlie Paddock from Los Angeles, proves again why he is called the "world's fastest human." He takes the 100 meter dash in a time of 10 4/5 seconds.

Americans also capture first place in the pole vault, the long jump, 200 meters, hammer throw, 56-pound weight, and the 400 meter relay with a team anchored by Paddock.

Nevertheless, the over-all performance is dismal, matching the enthusiasm of the Belgians, who find it extremely difficult to get very excited about the games, the stadium, with a capacity of 30,000, is never filled.

The new distance running sensation from Finland, Paavo Nurmi, makes his Olympic debut. The Finns score heavily in the long races.

The American team again leaves the Olympic Games victorious in over-all points, but well aware that a lot of hard work is necessary to continue its dominance in international competition.

Q) Could you please send me the names of the 1927 Yankees known as "Murderer's Row"? — Marty Rossman, Skokie, Ill.

A) Tony Lazzeri, Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth, Earle Combs and Bob Meusel — but they weren't the original Murderer's Row. The originals on the Yankees predated Ruth's arrival when a newspaper cartoonist in 1919 hung the tag on Ping Bodie, Roger Peckinpaugh, Duffy Lewis and Home Run Baker.

Q) In all the stories about home runs lately, I was amazed to see that Home Run Baker only hit nine when he led the league one year. Did that earn him the name, and what was his real name? — Bert Griffin, Albany, N.Y.

A) John Franklin Baker, a third baseman, won his sobriquet in the 1911 World Series when he hit a high fast ball off the Giants' Rube Marquard, and Christy Mathewson made headlines by saying, so what, the guy can't hit a low curve. Whereupon Baker hit a Mathewson low curve over the rightfield fence next day and became Home Run forever. Two home runs in two games in those days was almost equivalent to Johnny Vander Meer's back-to-back no-hitters years later. At the time, Baker was a member of the Philly A's "100,000 infield."

Q) I know Ruth was great, but I am tired of reading about the '27 Yankees being kings of the home run. When I grew up in the late '30s the Yankees practically owned the home run. Didn't one of those teams hit more homers than Ruth's bunch? — Eddie Demereaux, Norfolk, Va.

A) The perfect glorification for the great Yankee hitters of that era is the phrase "Five O'Clock Lightning." When King Kong Keller, Joe Gordon, Tommy Henrich, Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey (not necessarily in that order) came to bat in the seventh and eighth innings, the lightning was blinding, at about 5 o'clock, Eastern Standard time. Those Yankee teams twice hit 174 homers, compared to 1927's total of 158. The Maris-Mantle Yankees of 1961, hold the current team homer record, 240, but the sportswriters of their era and had run out of inspiration — except for "the M&M Boys."

Q) I am a senior citizen and have watched the Cubs play at Wrigley Field since 1916. Aaron's record should only be a modern record compared to Babe Ruth, because Ruth was at bat 3,000 times less than Aaron. — Edward M. Schneider, Melrose Park, Ill.

A) Aaron's achievement needs no apologies, or asterisks. Mrs. George Herman Ruth said, "Whatever Aaron does, there was still only one Babe." The Babe topped entire teams in his home run totals, and he was the first to hit 30 in a season, the first to hit 40 and 50 ... and 60.

Q) The year Ruth hit his 60, how many did Lou Gehrig have and is that the record for two men on a team? — Larry Czokpe, Grand Rapids.

A) The forgotten man in Maris' 61-homer year was Mickey Mantle. Lou hit 47 in Babe's big year, and there production was the two-man record until the Maris-Mantle combine in 1961. Mantle hit 54, and for awhile was neck-and-neck with Roger. But as the gap widened, it became clear that Mick couldn't overhaul his teammate.

Dick Powell Jr. — the resemblance is uncanny

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Visitors at 20th Century-Fox studio sometimes stare at the messenger passing with a load of scripts. "Doesn't he look like Dick Powell?" they ask.

"It happens quite a bit, especially since I got my hair cut," says Dick Powell Jr., 23. The resemblance is uncanny. The same flashing smile and luxuriant, widow's-peaked hair.

THE ONLY difference is that young Powell is a few inches shorter than his 6-foot dad, star of 1930s musicals and private-eye movies of the 1940s.

The resemblance won him his film debut. Paramount was seeking a lookalike to double as Dick Powell in a re-creation of "Flirtation Walk" for the movie about the talkie period, "Day of the Locust." Why not Dick Powell Jr.?

"Why not?" agreed young Powell, sacrificing his shoulder-length hair to pose as a West Point cadet in the wedding scene with Ruby Keeler (played by Laurie Lannphere). It was a three-day job with no dialogue and no songs. But Powell counted it as another boost for his goal to be a director-producer like his father was in later life.

"I've already got a Dick Powell Jr. Fan Club," he remarked with a grin. "So far there are four members."

WHEN Powell was born, his father was a top actor-director in films, and his mother, June Allyson, reigned as star of MGM romances. Powell Sr. later pioneered television films as a founder of Four Star Productions.

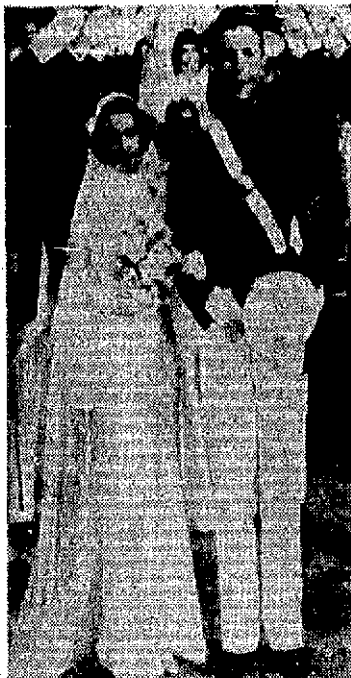

"I didn't see a great deal of my father in those years," the son recalled. "He would often leave for the studio at six in the morning and return at eight in the evening."

"But the times we were together I remember vividly. Like when we took the yacht out into the ocean and the engines failed. We were stranded at four in the morning."

Powell died of cancer in 1963, when his son was 12. The family moved to Newport Harbor, where Dick attended high school. He spent a year at Orange Coast College and a half-year at Santa Monica City College.

"I figured for what I wanted to do, the best education I could get was on the job," he reasoned. "You can't learn about films in college. Well, perhaps you can at a school like USC, but even so, the only real way to learn is just by doing it."

THOUGH he aims to be a director-producer he argues "you can't really understand directing unless you know the actor's problems." At 16, he toured with his mother and sister Pamela in a play, "Goodbye, Ghost." He appeared with Kay Ballard in "Gypsy" in San Diego but admits that he hadn't inherited his parents' musical talent.

"I've studied singing, but I don't think I have the voice for it," he said. "When we were on tour, Mother taught me the time step in the bathroom. I've forgotten it."

He has had one acting role in television, "Voyage of the Yes," which starred an old Beverly Hills buddy, Desi Arnaz Jr. Soon Powell leaves to tour with his mother in "Finishing Touches."

THAT will require a leave from his job as messenger for Spelling-Goldberg Productions on the Fox lot. He earns $135 a week and considers the work part of his growing experience: "I get to read the scripts even before they're submitted to the actors."

TITLE CHANGED

Columbia Pictures has set "For Pete's Sake" as the final release title for the Rastar production, starring Barbra Streisand, Michael Sarrazin and Estelle Parsons.

The comedy, originally titled "For Love of Pete," was directed by Peter Yates for producers Martin Erlichman and Stanley Shapiro. Phil Feldman was executive producer.

Aggies targets of put-down jokes

DALLAS — In Texas, they have "Aggie Jokes," which are about Texas Agricultural and Mechanical University students — but which are also greatly appreciated by the targets of the jokes. In fact, the Aggies are believed to be the chief distributors of the Aggie gags.

It is put-down humor, I agree with the editors and publishers of the latest volume that it should be encouraged.

THE NEW book of "Aggie Jokes" ($1, Gigm Press, Dallas) is dedicated "to Harold the Aggie who was such a slow reader that he belonged to the Page of the Month Club."

It carried the definition of "a galloping gourmet: an Aggie running after a garbage truck."

"Did you hear about the Aggie scientist who developed an artificial appendix?"

"There was an Aggie who was asked if he preferred red or white wine with dinner. 'It doesn't make any difference to me,' he said. 'I'm color-blind.'"

"There was an Aggie who thought High Cholesterol was a religious holiday."

"An Aggie was asked, 'Where was Joan of Arc burned?' and he replied, 'All over her body.'"

"A panhandler said to an Aggie, 'Would you give me 50¢ for a sandwich?' The Aggie said, 'I don't know. Let me see the sandwich.'" rivals at the University of Texas, which would be like Michigan making up jokes about Michigan State.

THE Aggie jokes are said to have been invented by the Texas A. & M.

The humor doesn't appear to have become dirty and the principals of the Gigm Press are three Dallas advertising executives, graduates of Georgia Tech, the University of Missouri and TCU "who wish to remain anonymous."

One more. An Aggie went into a bait shop and asked the price of worms. "All you want for $1," the clerk told him. The Aggie said, "O.K., I'll take $2 worth."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL.

Streaking is giving nudity a bad name. Alan King's ABC comedy show had a streaking event — one of the writers stripped and streaked. It was deleted on the ground that streaking isn't funny any more. (It is when I do it.)

Martha Mitchell's tell-all book was turned down by a major publisher. . . . One of the world's major hotels (not in NY) may close. Neither the new or old owners can afford it.

Roberta Peters was vocalizing, warming up to do an operatic aria with Jan Peerce on the Mike Douglas show in Philadelphia. Ann Medea scowled at her, "You've got some nerve doing that aria! I was going to do that song!"

I'D Rather Be Light

At one time people worked to get rich. Nowadays they have to work hard just to get even.

Watch the families on TV shows, and you'll notice they don't waste their time watching TV shows. All those fat diets you hear about indicate one thing — there are more problem eaters than problem drinkers.

There is a rapid change during a child's adolescence. For instance, between 14 and 17 a parent can age 20 years.

Someone described a hangover as the bad time a good time gives you.

Women are very secretive about their age, but they'll gladly tell their husbands how old their fur coats are.

Taffy Tuttle says she was at a party the other night but was so tired she could hardly keep her ears open.

If you don't think there are two sides to every story, just listen to both the 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. news broadcasts.

Song recital

Soprano Yolanda Roman, assisted by Natalie Limonick at the piano, gives a song recital at Brand Library, Glendale, next Friday night at 8.

Easter services spotlighted

TV-Radio Editor

The 54th annual Easter Sunrise Service at the Hollywood Bowl will be televised live on KTV (Channel 11) from 5:55 a.m. to 7:15 a.m. Sunday.

On radio, the service will be carried, starting at 6 a.m., on KNX (1070) and the CBS radio network. The Mormon Tabernacle Choir, normally heard at 6:30 a.m. on KNX, will air on Easter Sunday only at 5:30 a.m.

Radio station KFI (640) and the NBC radio network will broadcast another Easter Sunrise Service — the one from Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia — from 5:30 to 6 a.m. Music will be provided by the U.S. Army Chorus and the U.S. Marine Band.

In the service from the Hollywood Bowl, baritone John Raft will be the featured soloist and Anita Priest, the organist. Actress Margaret O'Brien will read the traditional poem "The Master Is Coming."

The William Hall Choral and the Easter Sunrise Youth Chorus, augmented by the Blessed Sacrament Children's Choir, also will be featured.

Dr. Robert H. Schuller, founder-pastor of the Garden Grove Community Drive-In Church, will officiate at the nondenominational service, assisted by Rev. Dan Genuing of Mt. Hollywood Congregational Church. Rev. Herbert Stephens, pastor of the First AME Church, will give the benediction.

Father Emory Tang, O.F.M., will read "The Prayer of St. Francis of Assisi."

The Hollywood Bowl Easter Sunrise Service will be rebroadcast starting at 7:30 a.m., again on Channel 11.

A NUMBER of other Easter programs will be presented on television, so persons interested should be sure to check Sunday's TV logs.

One, airing on KNXT (Channel 2) from 9:30 to 10 a.m., is titled "Hope, A Story of Easter." It is a religious program for mentally retarded youngsters that features a Catholic Mass. Father Michael Gilseman of the Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles conducts the service, adapted from traditional liturgy to the developmentally disabled.

Featured on the program are songs by the Hope Choir from the Hope School for the Mentally Retarded in Anaheim. His Eminence Cardinal Timothy Manning appears at the end of the program to elaborate on the program's theme. "Hope, A Story of Easter" was produced by KNXT's Ervin Zavada and the Catholic Archdiocese.

NBC (Channel 4) will televise the Easter Sunday Mass from the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C., from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. From 10 to 11 a.m., Channel 9 will present Pope Paul VI's Easter Mass and message of peace to the world, taped in Rome.

"CALIFORNIA'S Children," a half-hour program focusing on the most successful demonstration programs in the state's school system, will air on KABC-TV (Channel 7) at noon Sunday.

Among the programs shown will be the demonstration mathematics program that has been operating at Franklin Junior High School in Long Beach for the past five years. Scenes for the film were taken last year at Franklin; this is the first time for the program to be shown on commercial TV.

Dr. Wilson Riles, state superintendent of public instruction, is the narrator.

"YOU'RE TOO FAT!" is the title of a one-hour NBC News special to be presented at 10 p.m. Sunday on Channel 4. It examines the ways that millions of overweight Americans try to shed pounds.

"Film Flam," a look at how Hollywood's special effects wizards create their magic, will air from 6 to 7 p.m. Sunday on KHJ-TV (Channel 9). It is hosted by Oscar-winning actor George Kennedy.

"Mamma Never Told Me," a half-hour "Medix" program on venereal disease among high school students, will be on Channel 2 at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Femme fatale's weapon is back

By JOHN VINOCUR

PARIS (AP) — For those worried about La France Eternelle and her somber position on the Common market, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and other grave subjects, take heart: the soul of France is still eternelle.

The garter belt is back. Returning are the days of one knee gently crossing another, an inch or less of flesh flashing at a stocking top. After a decade of domination, the pantyhose conspiracy is trembling in its socks.

STOCKINGS and garter belt sales are up 20 percent in Paris this spring, especially among women 17 to 25, according to industry figures. And a small boom is expected by fall.

"It's fine news," said Antoine Blondin, a popular French writer who has campaigned against pantyhose. "The first thing I give a woman I love is a garter belt."

"There's nothing more desert-like than pantyhose — no contrasts — and nobody visits a desert. The garter belt on the other hand is like a James Bond weapon. The thigh encircled, the arrow of the garter, the little bit of promised land between the panty and the stocking. It's as beautiful a design as the Parthenon."

The origin of the fashion is apparently the nostalgia wave of the 1930's and movies in which actresses like Jacqueline Bisset looked nicely evil in stockings and a garter belt.

"IT'S OBVIOUSLY erotic," said Jacques Matalon, a spokesman for the stocking industry. "Why describe it any other way?"

"The production of garter belts was almost stopped when the kids began asking for them. The industry has geared up — it doesn't represent much of an investment — and now we'll see. It may not last more than a season or two. Although men will encourage their women to wear them, we've found out that mostly women don't give a damn about what men think in terms of fashion. So this is something that young women like."

BLONDIN, a serious writer who had a page one commentary on the French presidential election in the newspaper le Figaro on Friday, is completing a book on the garter belt.

"Between Brigitte Bardot and an insignificant little girl in a garter belt and stockings, there would not be a second's hesitation for me," he said.

THIS FRENCH model displays proof that the garter belt industry in Paris is snapping back.

Superman seeks 'welfare' funds

METROPOLIS, Ill. (UPI) — Superman may be down, but he's not out. A government grant may cure what ails him.

That's the hope of Superman boosters, past and present in his adopted hometown, and the doer of good deeds from the planet Krypton himself.

James Crain of Mounds, Ill., president of Metropolis Recreation, Inc., the group which subscribed to $250,000 in stock to open an "Amazing World of Superman Exhibition Center" in a remodeled roller skating rink here, says he hasn't given up hope.

The center opened last Memorial Day weekend with a 35th birthday party for Superman, portrayed by Mike Forbes, 6-foot-6 1/2, 250-pound Marion High School English and psychology teacher. The season ran through Labor Day.

But with floods, delays in the opening of a new Interstate highway and the replica of an 18th Century fort next to the center, and the beginning of the energy crunch, only 15,000 persons passed through the turnstiles for a look at an impressive array of Superman memorabilia.

Crain said it is doubtful that the center will be open at all this summer because his group plans to auction off some of the Superman materials to solidify its financial position.

Crain says he still believes there's a chance for a Disneyland-like recreation complex in the years ahead that would draw millions of visitors to this town of 7,000 on the Ohio River in southern Illinois.

Metropolis Recreation, Inc., Crain said, has applied for a $50,000 Economic Development Administration grant for a feasibility survey to determine the prospects of forging ahead with the second stage of the Superman project which would cost millions.

"Big investors insist on such a survey," said Crain, who has visited several large cities and talked to at least 45 other potential backers.

Meanwhile, waiting in the wings and still full of Superman enthusiasm is Bob Westerfield, a former professional football player who moved here from Owensboro, Ky., and got the Superman ball rolling.

Westerfield is a stockholder in the Superman project but bowed out of a management post last summer in disagreements over how the project should be promoted.

"The interest in Superman is still alive," said Westerfield. "Why a woman from Pennsylvania called the other day and talked for half an hour about it. And the letters keep pouring in."

Westerfield would welcome another chance at the Superman project.

He envisions taking the Superman show on the road if necessary in arrangements with large department stores to sell Superman wares to help replenish the Superman coffers.

"Why you could get Batman to wrestle Superman and bring thousands of people flooding into this town," said Westerfield.

"very concerned about this matter" and doesn't regard it as a "joke."

"The contest ridicules women for their physical characteristics," Mrs. Talbott said. "If the bar were having a contest where the Negro with the blackest skin wins a prize, we could identify it as blatant racism."

Mrs. Talbott, who said many female patrons at the tavern resent being "inspected" in the contest, will take her request for revocation of the bar's beer and liquor permit to the city council.

Women's liberation group goes after bar's booby prize

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—Women liberationists here have opened an attack on a Des Moines tavern that awards a weekly door prize to the girl with the biggest bosom.

Irene Talbott, president of the Des Moines chapter of the National Organization of Women (NOW), said the city council should revoke the beer and liquor license held by the Totem Pole Lounge because the contest is "insulting, degrading and in extremely poor taste."

advertising a contest in local college student newspapers in which the "girl with the largest breasts wins a door prize."

Bill Warnacke, manager of the Totem Pole, said the contest has been held one night each week and will continue because it has been popular with the patrons. He said he will ignore a letter from Mrs. Talbott about the contest.

"It's no strip down deal or anything like that," Warnacke said.

However, Mrs. Talbott said her organization is

Boston doctor indicted for manslaughter after abortion

By ROBERT REINHOLD
New York Times Service

BOSTON—A leading Boston doctor has been indicted for manslaughter in the death of a fetus in connection with an abortion, and four other doctors have been accused of violating a 19th-century law against grave-robbing for using tissue from aborted fetuses for medical research.

The indictments, which spread dismay and indignation in Boston's huge medical research establishment, were handed up Thursday by a Suffolk County grand jury. If upheld in court, medical specialists say, the decisions could cripple much medical research and force doctors to attempt to keep many aborted fetuses alive by artificial means.

Indicted for manslaughter was Dr. Kenneth Edelin, chief resident for obstetrics and gynecology at Boston City Hospital. He was accused of causing the death of a 24-week-old fetus, called a viable "baby boy" by the prosecutor, after it was removed during a therapeutic abortion performed at the mother's request last October.

THE FOUR others, named in separate charges, were Dr. Leon D. Sabath, Dr. Leonard Berman, Dr. David Charles and Dr. Agneta Philipson, all currently or formerly with the hospital. They were accused not of causing any deaths but of violating an obscure, seldom-used Massachusetts law forbidding the carrying away of human bodies or remains for the purpose of dissection. They had been involved, during 1971 and 1972, in a federally supported experiment to determine which of two antibiotics taken by pregnant women works better in stopping bacterial infections in the unborn fetus.

The indictments were characterized by many in the outraged medical community here as essentially political, brought in response to heavy pressures from antiabortion, or "right to life," forces, which are politically potent in heavily Roman Catholic Massachusetts.

The charges were brought by the office of Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne, an elderly prosecutor who is up for reelection this year.

THE PROSECUTION of the doctors, who were suspended without prejudice from the hospital, was seen by many as an end run to get around last year's Supreme Court ruling, which rendered the abortion laws of Massachusetts and many other states invalid. The issue has been a particularly emotional one here.

The charges raise many murky medical and legal questions about the point at which life begins, about the rights of the mother versus the responsibility of the state to protect potential life and the needs of medical research. Much of this research allegedly depends on the availability of fetal tissue.

In an interview, Assistant Dist. Atty. Newman A. Flanagan said that the abortion performed by Dr. Edelin was perfectly legal under the Supreme Court ruling but that the question at issue was what happened to the fetus, which was removed surgically by hysterectomy, a technique similar to caesarean section. "All I can tell you is that a viable fetus was killed by the doctor," he said. He would not say how the fetus was killed.

Flanagan was saying, in effect, that the fetus had the full legal standing of a human being. In its ruling, citing medical opinion, the Supreme Court held that a state's right to protect unborn life began only at the point at which the fetus is viable outside the mother's womb which it said is "usually placed at about seven months (28 weeks), but may occur earlier, even at 24 weeks."

Dr. Arthur Hertig, a leading authority on human embryology, said Friday that in all his years at Boston's lying-in hospital, he had never seen a premature infant survive at less than 28 weeks.

Edelin's indictment was an outgrowth of a separate inquiry into the actions of the four other doctors. They had used what is by now a common medical technique of performing tests on fetuses to be discarded after regular abortions. When results of their work were published last June in the New England Journal of Medicine, a public uproar ensued, leading to the indictments.

THE EXPERIMENT was undertaken to study alternatives to penicillin, to which many pregnant women are allergic, in the prevention of such intrauterine infections as congenital syphilis. Two antibiotics, called erythromycin and clindamycin, were widely used as substitutes, but there was some doubt about whether enough of the drug passed through the placenta to the fetus to do any good.

To find out, 33 pregnant women who were about to undergo therapeutic abortions and who gave their written consent, were given doses of the drugs. After the abortions, the dead fetuses were analyzed for drug content. The team found that both drugs did cross the placental barrier but that clindamycin did it "more readily."

Such fetal experiments have played a crucial role in the history of medical science. The development of the vaccine against polio was made possible by growing the polio virus in tissue cultured from aborted fetuses. The virus could not be grown in adult tissue. Dr. Thomas H. Weller and Dr. John F. Enders of Harvard won the Nobel Prize in physiology and medicine in 1954 for this work.

New serum stops deadly rabies cure side effects

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A team of scientists has developed an antirabies serum which eliminates the sometimes fatal side effects of the horse serum now used in rabies treatment.

But a person bitten by a rabid animal still must undergo the painful antirabies therapy of 21 injections in the stomach.

THE NEW serum is extracted from human blood instead of horse blood. It was tested on 153 volunteers, college students and prisoners, and found to have no significant side effects.

The horse serum, on the other hand, has side effects which are sometimes fatal and frequently "make patients miserable with fever, aching, and pain in the arms, legs and back," said Dr. Michael Gregg, chief of viral diseases at the federal government's Center for Disease Control.

"We've eliminated all the major dangers of reaction to serum sickness now," he said.

The new serum is extracted from the blood of men and women previously immunized against rabies. It was developed by a team of scientists at the Center for Disease Control, one of the largest federal research laboratories.

IT IS soon to be licensed by the Federal Bureau of Biologics, Gregg said. Two pharmaceutical companies are manufacturing the serum in anticipation of the licensing.

The new serum is the latest of several advancements in rabies treatment since 1950. For nearly seven decades, rabies victims had been treated with a vaccine prepared in animal brains; a therapy introduced by Louis Pasteur in 1884.

"It caused encephalitis in one out of every 5,000 persons," said Dr. Michael Hattwick, an epidemiologist at the Center for Disease Control.

A vaccine prepared from duck embryos was developed in the early '50s. It replaced Pasteur's vaccine and eliminated the encephalitis problem.

BUT another problem remained. People bitten by rabid animals still sometimes developed rabies, even after receiving the 21 injection vaccine therapy over 14 days. The problem was that the new duck embryo vaccine, like Pasteur's vaccine, required and still requires six or seven days to develop antibodies. Rabies sometimes develops faster. It attacks all the organs and is nearly always fatal.

Horse serum was developed in the early '50s as a supplement for the vaccine treatment. The horse serum provides immediate, temporary immunity until the vaccines can develop the antibodies for permanent immunity. The new human serum does what the horse serum does, without the side effects.

The horse serum and human serum are administered similarly. From a single syringe, a little serum is injected into the bite wound and the rest into a buttock.

In developing the human blood serum, scientists at the Center for Disease Control faced a difficult problem finding people with rabies immunity.

"THERE'S only one child in the United States who's recovered from rabies," Hattwick said. "It was obvious we couldn't bleed him, so we had to go to people who've been immunized."

Meningitis cases linked to pets up

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Center of Disease Control Friday reported 42 additional cases of meningitis infection associated with hamsters, raising the total number across the nation to at least 93.

The states reporting cases were New York 39, California 29, Florida 14, Massachusetts 6, New Jersey 4, and one each in Minnesota and Nevada.

The NCDC said the illness is transmitted to humans by hamsters as lymphocytic choriomeningitis, a mild form of meningitis. State health officials are working with the federal agency to track down the diseased animals, popular as children's pets.

Dr. George Hardy, health officer for Jefferson County (Birmingham) Ala., where one "probable" case of the disease was reported, said it is transmitted to man by urine and feces.

He said the course of the disease in humans is short and rarely fatal.

No deaths in the current outbreak have been reported, the NCDC said.

Worried but sleeping? Don't stop worrying!

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Don't stop worrying if you're chronically depressed but have no trouble sleeping. You may be sleeping too much.

The Sleep and Dream Laboratory of the University of Virginia believes that while insomnia is often associated with depression, excessive sleeping — or hypersomnia — also plagues victims of depression.

"WHEN you study the cases of the country's sleep clinics, you find that 40 to 45 percent of referrals involve people whose problem is that they sleep too much or are drowsy during the day, particularly among the young," Dr. Robert Van De Castle, director of the laboratory, said Friday.

"They pull up the covers and turn off the world," he said.

The sleep laboratory is beginning a three-year study of sleep problems among the young that will be financed by a $15,000 yearly grant from the Pfizer Laboratories of New York.

Dr. David R. Hawkins, chairman of the department of psychiatry at the university medical center said the study will delve into the interrelationships of moods, drugs and hormones in the sleep patterns of the younger population.

"Most work on sleep problems has centered on older persons, and the younger population has been largely ignored," Hawkins said.

"Most depressed persons are older, and older people generally have less third or fourth stage sleep anyway."

THE GREAT RV EVENT GOES ON!

OPEN ROAD — OPEN EASTER!

THE GREAT WAR AGAINST SOARING RV PRICES CONTINUES AT YOUR FOUR GIANT OPEN ROAD RV CENTERS IN CARSON, ANAHEIM, HUNTINGTON BEACH, VAN NUYS AND THE L.A. CONVENTION CENTER

War Declared On High Prices! The Embargo Is Off. The Gas Shortage Is Over. The War Is On! Seventeen Acres of Campers, Trailers, Motor Homes, Trucks and 5th Wheelers Are On Sale This Weekend at Open Road.

The RV business is booming again. Prices are booming too, but not at Open Road. By joining four giant RV Centers, OPEN ROAD SOUTH, OPEN ROAD ANAHEIM, OPEN ROAD HUNTINGTON BEACH & beginning this weekend, OPEN ROAD THE VALLEY, together for this massive merchandising campaign, we know that we can make it impossible for you to buy elsewhere! During the recent gas shortage we stockpiled 17 acres of RV's. Even though the crisis is over, our "War Prices" are still good this weekend. Families are driving from all over Southern California to take advantage of these unbelievable bargains. See us today!

War Declared on Sulking and Frowning Big "End of the Embargo" Family Party — Lots of Free Stuff!

Sunrise services herald Easter

By LES RODNEY

Friday's shocked gloom is replaced by Sunday's joy as the meaning of Jesus Christ's brief ministry on earth begins to come clear. Death is swallowed in victory. Easter morn dawns with the message that has reverberated through the world since 30 A.D. "He Is Risen."

Throngs of Southern Californians will gather Sunday in a variety of outdoor settings to hear the "Good News" of the resurrection proclaimed in word and song. With one little difference in this year of 1974. Sinful, bumbling man has gotten himself into an energy crisis in addition to all his other crises. Daylight Saving time is in effect, so sunrise observances will start later than last year.

REV. SCHULLER
Hollywood Bowl

The Hollywood Bowl observance, for the first time in 54 years, will start at 6 instead of the traditional 5 o'clock. Speaker will be Rev. Robert H. Schuller, founder-pastor of Garden Grove Community Church, which started the Southland's drive-in worship services.

ANOTHER CHANGE, locally, will be the absence of a sunrise observance at the Long Beach Naval Station, due to the cutback and transfer program.

However, Long Beach area residents will not lack for colorful and stirring sunrise services, some less ambitious than others, but all with the same content.

The usual 5,000 worshippers are expected at the 16th annual Easter Sunrise Service in front of the Church of Our Fathers at Forest Lawn, Cypress, opening with the flight of 500 white doves at 6:15.

This second largest of Southern California observances, sponsored by the Los Alamitos-Ros-

NORMA ZIMMER
Sunrise at Cypress

smoor Jaycees and the Ministerial Association will then hear concert star Norma Zimmer sing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "The Holy City." Speaker will be Rev. David M. Reed of Long Beach First Congregational Church, whose topic will be "Judas Didn't Make It."

For those who want to jump into their cars and stay right in the car for the one-hour worship, El Dorado Park Community Church, at 3655 Norwalk Blvd., Long Beach, will hold 6:30 services in the drive-in area, with music by the Eternal Revenue, and message by Rev. Kenneth Leestma.

Further to the north, another huge drive-in, walk-in church, New Life Community of Artesia-Cerritos, at 18800 Norwalk Blvd., will hold 7 a.m. services featuring the New Life Youth Ensemble and followed by a continental breakfast on the house of the Lord.

FOR THE downtown Long Beach area, Covenant Presbyterian at Third and Atlantic will again host a sunrise service in the enclosed outdoor courtyard, at 6:30, titled "A Celebration of Forgiveness." Lay people and youth will lead in the music and Rev. R. Michael McLellan will preach on Yellow Ribbons, a title based on a contemporary song about a man returning home and asking that if he is welcome they "tie a yellow ribbon round the old oak tree."

Comments McLellan: "The religious essence of Good Friday is pardon, but Easter goes beyond that to a celebration of God's supreme act of forgiveness. An act which demands that we forgive ourselves and others." The service will conclude with a nominally priced continental breakfast in the Fellowship Hall for those who are hungry.

Three churches combine to sponsor a 6:30 service outdoors at Christian Reformed, 5559 E. Wardlow Road. In addition to the host church, they are St. Luke's Lutheran and University Baptist, with music by a combined youth choir.

For West Side churches, there will be a 6 o'clock service in Silverado Park.

From the striking vantage point of the top of Signal Hill, the Rotary Club of that city will again sponsor a 6:15 worship, with Mayor Gertrude Beebe offering the welcome. Rev. Dr. Hugh M. Tiner of Long Beach Uptown Church of Christ will speak on "The Resurrection Speaks to Our World."

EXPLAINING the concept of his church's "New Life" sunrise service at 6:30, Pastor John T. Meether of St. Paul's Lutheran, 2283 Palo Verde Ave., said: "There is another dominate theme which is often forgotten by those who merely enjoy the symbols of the season. To latch onto the new in Christ with all its blessings involves a moving away from the old existence. Paul puts it this way in his writings — 'Put away the old leaven of evil and malice and become new leaven in Christ.' His thoughts reach back to the Jewish practice of removing all leaven from the household in preparation for the Passover celebration.

"His point is also quite clear: to truly have the joy and blessing of the new life in Christ we must crucify all evil and move out in repentance and faith each day. But it is not merely that we give up evil; it is also that we add to our lives the self-giving nature that typified our Lord's existence upon this earth. In Him we become God's servant to the whole world."

St. Paul's, a Missouri Synod affiliated church, will serve Easter breakfast from 7:30 to 9, followed by services at that last hour.

For those who do not make it to the dramatic one-hour sunrise observances, there are Easter programs at more traditional hours in other churches as well.

New Life Community of Cerritos will hold 9:30 and 11 a.m. services for the later arrivals. El Dorado Park Community of Long Beach will also double in brass, with identical 9 and 11 a.m. services for combined drive-in, walk-in, and will wind up the big day at 7 p.m. with "The Sounds of Love," a color film starring Corrie ten Boom, Dale Evans Rogers and Maria von Trapp.

CHRIST LUTHERAN, at 6500 Stearns St. will follow its 6 a.m. service with others at 8, 9:30 and 11. There will be an outdoor display of art, photography, banners and other creative expressions. The Lord's Joyful, Chancel Choir and instrumentalists will supply the music, with breakfast served a nominal cost by the youth at 7.

Sunrise service will be held on Reservoir Hill at 6 by Wesley United Methodist, followed by breakfast prepared by the youth at the church, 1100 Freeman Ave. from 7 to 8:30, and services at 9 and 10:30.

Artesia Cerritos Methodist, at 188th Street and Arline Avenue, will hold a sunrise service at 6, plus 8 and 10 a.m. worship.

Following sunrise service at 6:30; Our Saviour's Lutheran, 370 Junipero Ave., will hold 8:30 and 11 a.m. festival worship services with three choirs contributing.

Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, 1900 E. Carson St., will have sunrise service by the youth at 6:30, and festival worship service at 10:30, with the sermon by Pastor Brethman "Easter Is God's Sunrise."

Bethany Lutheran, 4644 Clark Ave., will lead off with a 6:30 sunrise service with the Bethany Men's Chorus and trumpeters, and other festival worshipers are at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. The soaring Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah will be heard at 8.

At St. Anselm Episcopal of Garden Grove, a choral festival sunrise service at 6 will be followed by an 8 a.m. service of the Holy Eucharist and choral festival eucharist at 10. Also an evening service at 6:30.

SEVERAL LARGE area churches which do not hold morning services will put on musical celebrations Easter evening.

At First Baptist, 10th and Pine, the Chancel Choir will present the joyous "Alleluia!" at 7 p.m., with words and music by Bill and Gloria Gaither and Ronn Huff, arranged and orchestrated by the latter. In the spirit of Easter's triumph, observes Rev. Dr. Frank M.

Kepner, "Let's Just Praise the Lord!"

Lakewood High School auditorium will be the scene of "Hallelujah, a Symphony of Praise" by the combined choirs and orchestras of First Baptist Church of Lakewood and North Long Beach Brethren Church, a wide-ranging sacred concert to climax Easter Sunday, presented twice, at 6 and 8 p.m. Tickets for free reserved seats are available at either church, or, if still available, at the Lakewood High door at concert time. The excellent musical reputation of these two vigorous churches suggests it will be well worth the effort.

First Lutheran, 905 Atlantic Ave., will hold 8:30 and 11 a.m. service with the altar, as annually, banked by Easter lilies, among which will be seen the Resurrection Mosaic, made by the Jack Wolter family. The hymns of the joyous congregation will be supported by the organ and a brass ensemble, and memorial handbells, a recent gift, will be heard. Pastor Edward Schroeder notes that Easter will take on an even deeper meaning to "those of us who visited the sites of the crucifixion and resurrection in Jerusalem last summer, partaking of Holy Communion in Joseph's Garden facing the open tomb."

"CELEBRATE LIFE," a modern musical rendition of the life of Christ, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. by the young people of Los Altos Brethren, 6565 Stearns St.

St. Stephen Lutheran, 1629 Pine Ave., will hold its service at 10 a.m., with the Children's Choir helping with the music. At Mayfair Community Reformed of Lakewood, 6150 Bellflower Blvd., the Easter cantata "Jesus Is Coming" will be presented at 8 a.m., followed by breakfast, the 11 a.m. service, and finally a 6 p.m. celebration entitled "No Death." North Long Beach Christian, at 1115 will hold a 10:45 a.m. service. "The Thorn-Crowned King," a cantata by Fred Holton, will be presented at 10:45 a.m. by Community Grace Brethren, 5885 Downey Ave., followed by Pastor Colburn's brief message: "God's Amen to Calvary." At the Bellflower Church of the Nazarene, 17200 Clark Ave., the Easter musical "Alleluia" will be presented at 10:30 a.m., with message by Rev. Nancy Jane Kelly, former legendary woman basketball star. At Immanuel Lutheran, 346 Carson St., festive services will be held at 8 and 10 a.m. featuring the flowered cross and memorial garden.

At Los Altos United, 5550 Atherton St. (Congregational), dual services will be held at 9 and 10:30 a.m. Bellflower Baptist, 17456 Downey Ave., will present gospel artists Jim and Marilyn Bell in concert at the 7 p.m. service. Westminster Community Presbyterian, 2474 Pacific Ave., will hold 9 and 10:30 a.m. services.

TRUMPETS AND organ will lead the congregation in the processional "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today!" at the 7:30 and 10 a.m. festival services in University Lutheran, 1429 Clark Ave. A folk guitarist will aid in the early service. At Mt. Olivet Lutheran of Lakewood, 4405 South St., the orchestra and three choirs will participate at 8 and 10:15 a.m. services. Los Altos United Methodist, 5950 E. Willow St., has scheduled services at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Typical of many Roman Catholic observances, an Easter vigil will begin tonight at 5:30 at St. Maria Goretti, 3950 Palo Verde Ave., with Easter Sunday Masses at 7:30, 9, 10:30 a.m. and noon.

The Good News for modern man

After the Sabbath, as Sunday morning was dawning, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to look at the grave. Suddenly there was a strong earthquake; an angel of the Lord came down from heaven, rolled the stone away, and sat on it. His appearance was like lightning and his clothes were white as snow. The guards were so afraid that they trembled and became like dead men.

The angel spoke to the women. "You must not be afraid," he said. "I know you are looking for Jesus who was nailed to the cross. He is not here; he has risen, just as he said. Come here and see the place where he lay. Quickly, now, go and tell his disciples: 'He has been raised from death, and now he is going to Galilee ahead of you; there you will see him!' Remember what I have told you." So they left the grave in a hurry, afraid and yet filled with joy, and ran to tell his disciples.

Suddenly Jesus met them and said, "Peace be with you." They came up to him, took hold of his feet, and worshipped him. "Do not be afraid," Jesus said to them. "Go and tell my brothers to go to Galilee, and there they will see me."

Some Icelanders revive worship of Viking gods

By KARI JONASSON

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — In the year 1,000 Iceland officially became Christian, but old traditions don't die fast and today this island nation is seeing a rebirth of heathenism with worship to such gods as Thor and Odin.

In the old days the Vikings used to offer humans and animals as sacrifices to their gods. Today the offerings consist mainly of wine and corn.

The Viking cult, started two years ago, was granted recognition last year by Prime Minister Olofur Johannesson over the protest of the official Lutheran Church of Iceland.

Dag Thorleifsson, one of the leaders of the new heathens, said in an interview there were more than 100 active members now "and many more are following this new religion and coming to public meetings."

SOME people, including Iceland's only Nobel Prize winner, Halldor Laxness, have said Icelanders never really became Christians and are still infatuated with their old Viking god heroes — Thor, Odin, Tyr, Aegir, and others.

"I am sure that Iceland is the most ideal country for the Viking cult because of the big interest in the old gods and our sagas which link us to the old times when Thor and Odin ruled," said Thorleifsson, 37.

"This is the first honest attempt to revive the cult in Europe," he said.

The so-called high priest of the cult is Sveinbjorn Beinteinsson, a 47-year-old farmer and a well known Icelandic singer.

IN PLACE of the old-time human sacrifices — usually captured enemies — today's heathens place corn and wine on a statue of Thor.

Most of the sacrificing is done inside homes, but last year a large ceremony was held in the open air where the participants afterwards drank Icelandic root beer spiced with aquavit.

The Icelanders remind themselves of their heritage in many ways. For instance during the recent fishing rights dispute with Britain in which Icelandic ships fired across the bows of British trawlers, every one of the Icelandic gunboats was named after an old god.

According to Thorleifsson when the cult grows in popularity, Iceland will be divided into areas, each with a high priest.

"During the past years Christians have said God is dead," he said, "but we know that God is alive and that he appears in many forms including the old gods of the heathen times."

The cultists still do not have their own house of worship, but have asked the city of Reykjavik to provide them with land to build one.

STRASBOURG, France (UPI) — The Lutheran Church of Alsace and Lorraine, which has about 250,000 members, has declared that Lutheran churches "may welcome to communion the faithful of another church, including the Catholic Church."

'THE MESSIAH' SUNG IN PARK

The third annual Easter presentation of Handel's oratorio "The Messiah" will be presented Sunday, 6:30 a.m. at the bandshell in El Dorado Park, at Studebaker and Willow, by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The one-hour program, free to the public, features the 100-voice Mormon Choir of Long Beach East Stake, directed by Dr. I. Calvin Greer, professor of music at El Camino College. Soloists include Dr. Barbara Crockett and Dr. Edgar Thompson, professors of music at Long Beach State University and Mrs. Fay Banta, chairman of the Long Beach Stake Music Dept.

OF HUMAN FAILURE

The Cross, a Unique Tragedy

By MARK CLUTTER

In literature — and very often in life — tragedy is the failure of a hero because of a flaw in his otherwise admirable character.

The story of the Crucifixion is unique because the hero had no flaw. It alone of the great tragedies presents the tragic flaw of being human.

The people in the Good Friday drama were not totally evil. Most of them in their ordinary lives were just ordinary — the people one sees up and down any street. A few had a touch of the heroic.

Let us consider some of the major characters.

Pilate was the chief of police. It was his duty to maintain the Roman peace with the least necessary violence. History records that he could be ruthless in restoring peace. But peace was his ideal. The Roman policy worked well in most nations, but Judea was seething with revolution. Pilate, wishing to avoid a night of the long knives, bowed to the mob. It would be better, he thought, that one man should die than that a city should be drenched with blood.

The chief priests were determined to maintain strict religion in a conquered nation. To do this they were willing to compromise with Rome in everything except religion. Jesus sounded revolutionary to them. Certainly many of his friends were rebels.

His followers, even his disciples, could not understand that his kingdom was not of this world. They hoped he would be a guerrilla hero, a kind of young Fidel Castro, who would turn grass blades into swords and break the power of mighty Rome.

Judas is hard to understand, but it may be that his treason resulted from his despair when he realized his leader would never liberate Judea.

Such despair does explain the mob. Only a few days before the people cheered the Son of David as their hero. When they learned he would not lead their war, their love turned to murder.

Even the minor incidents tell of human flaw. Simon Peter, who cut off the ear of the high priest's servant in ill-considered defense of his master, denied he even knew him a few hours later.

Only his mother and John stood by him in his final agony.

The soldiers laughed and cursed as they shot craps. Men under iron discipline cannot afford pity.

That's the way men were then and that's the way they are today.

But there is also hope.

Easter follows Good Friday and Pentecost follows Easter. The emotionally unstable Simon Peter became Peter the Rock.

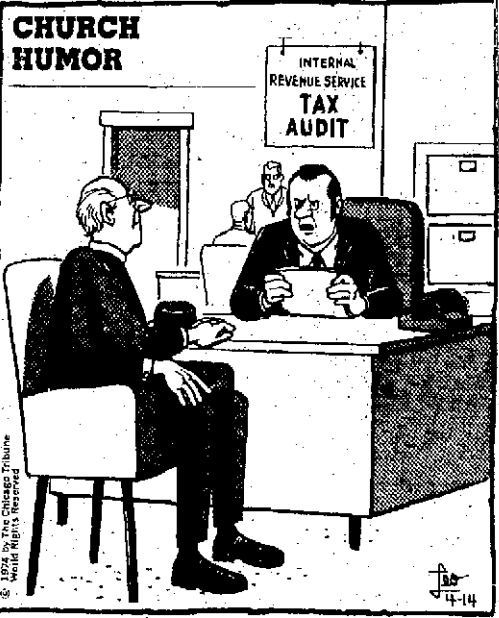

HERE is a medieval legend of Christ's return to heaven.

The whole company of heaven greeted him with joy. An angel asked: "Lord, what kind of church did you found?"

"Well," said Christ, "I found 11 men. They are fishermen and peasants and a corrupt tax collector. And some farm women and a notorious whore."

"Can you build a church on such frail and ignorant people?"

"I have no other plan," said Christ the King.

"If you don't mind, I'll be the judge of how much you should 'render to Caesar!'"

Asks support for National Council

The executive council of the United Church of Christ has reaffirmed the commitment of the two-million-member denomination to the ecumenical movement.

It urged agencies related to National Council of Churches units such as Church World Service and the Broadcasting and Film Commission to pay their "fair share" where possible of program budgets. They were also urged to oppose efforts to withdraw such units from the council and reorganize them as independent interdenominational bodies.

Pageant at Melodyland

A community Easter musical pageant called "The Living Cross" featuring Biblical dressed singers and players will be presented on the Melodyland circular tonight at 8 and Sunday at 5:30 and 8 p.m.

Dr. Ralph Wilkerson, pastor of Melodyland Christian Center, says "this will be a professional 90-minute dramatic production geared to depicting the Easter events of Christianity to Southern California communities."

A nearly 100 foot 'Living Cross' will extend from the stage to the back of the auditorium and will feature a 300 voice chorus.

Weatherfords back at Calvary

Following its annual tradition at Easter, Calvary Baptist Church of Bellflower, 14722 Clark Ave., will present the famed gospel singing Weatherford Quartet in all services Sunday.

They can be heard at the 9:45 and 11 a.m. worship, and at 7 p.m. The evening service will conclude with a special baptismal service. Calvary's Easter telecast will be seen on Channel 9 at 8:30 a.m. and on Channel 30 at 9 a.m.

Easter special by retarded

"Hope," an Easter special on CBS Channel 2 from 9:30 to 10 a.m., will bring a message of love from young men and women with mental retardation, as they celebrate an Easter Mass with Fr. Michael Gilseman. The program is sponsored by the Department of Special Services to the Handicapped of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles.

Participants come from many parts of the Southland, including Long Beach.

Racism called worst heresy

"Racism in the churches is the basic heresy of Christianity in America," said African Methodist Episcopal Bishop Frederick D. Jordan, Hollywood, in a recent speech in Charleston, S.C.

Bishop Jordan is chairman of the Consultation on Church Union.

Rev. Paul A. Crow Jr., general secretary of COCU, said, "We can deal with historic denominational differences, but that which continues to be a barrier is racism."

Mormon leader Easter message

President Spencer W. Kimball of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints issued the following statement for Easter, 1974:

When He spoke the word 'Mary' on that first Easter morning, a weeping Mary Magdalene beside the empty tomb knew the reality of the resurrection of her Lord.

To each of us, the resurrection is a personal blessing. Through Jesus Christ every individual now living, every descendant of Adam and Eve who has lived and will ever live upon this good earth, both the just and unjust, will be resurrected, as was our Savior.

Jesus Christ opened the way to an even greater blessing — eternal life — for those who keep the commandments of God. Eternal life means living in the presence of God throughout eternity and is the reward the faithful receive for living His commandments.

I give my humble but solemn witness to you that these gifts and promises have truly been given by the Lord.

War establishment blocks
peace, declares theologian

By JOHN KELLY
Ridder News Service

ST. PETER, Minn. — War continues to be with us only because the war-making establishment is very convincing, a Brazilian theologian said here.

By keeping peace on an ever moving horizon, war-makers can stay in business, said Dr. Rubem A. Alves, president of the Institute for the Advance Study of Religion, Sao Paulo.

The result is that "madness has become embodied in our social order," Alves told participants of the recent Gustavus Adolphus College Nobel Conference which had the theme "The Quest for Peace."

The war-making establishment should go out of business on the advent of peace, he said. By analogy, hospitals and doctors would disappear if disease ceased to exist.

But the military in all parts of the world has made self-perpetuation its primary goal and has pushed into second place its original reason for existence — the quest for peace, he said.

"The expansion of the war-producing institutions is directly related to affluence, and conversely, war is good business."

The characteristics of the modern military giant include a monopoly on information, with criticism considered grounds for treason, and science at the service of the war-makers, he said.

The result of this accumulation of power by the military is that the individual has little to say, the theologian stated.

Myths are necessary to justify the continued existence of the military, he said. One of these (myths) is the "enemy," just as witches were necessary scapegoats for the church during the Middle Ages.

Another is that love, humanity and righteousness are a monopoly "of our side," he said. "This leads to messianic obsessions which justify violence or "holy wars."

Alves took issue with the philosophy of military retaliation. "The logic of retaliation is 'I refuse to die alone. The enemy may destroy me — but I will prove my superior power even as I die by destroying the whole world.'"

He said, "The metaphysics of war proclaim that peace is possible only through victory, but victory is no longer possible. Victory and death are now two sides of the same reality."

The only way to break this vicious cycle is to say a "radical no" to the metaphysics of war and "break the sword," he said.

Pentecostal replies to reader letter

Dear Religion Editor,

In Christian Love, I feel compelled by the Spirit of God to respond to reader E.G. of Lakewood on his exception to the definition you offered in your article on the Pentecostal Movement among Lutherans.

I am a former Lutheran who found the reality of Christ as my personal Lord and Saviour in a Quaker church; and later received the fullness of the Infilling of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:4) with the initial physical manifestation of speaking in tongues.

Let me assure reader E.G. that the Baptism in the Holy Spirit is a second definite work of Grace; it is God's endowment with power from on high. We do not teach or claim anyone is not a Christian without this experience. Salvation is the work of Grace whereby we acknowledge our sinful state, ask and receive God's forgiveness, and receive His Son, Jesus Christ, into our hearts.

May I suggest E.G. might well profit from reading the following books: "A New Song" by Pat Boone; "Prison to Praise" by Merlin Carothers; "The Cross and the Switchblade" by David Wilkerson; and "They Speak with Other Tongues" by John Sherrill, paperback form. Long Beach

Priest, 78, crusades for dignity of women

By ARMANDO ACUNA
Ridder News Service
MOUNTAIN VIEW

For the past five years one man has crusaded for the dignity of women as vigorously as any women's liberationist.

He is the Rev. Francis J. Caffrey, a 78-year-old retired Catholic priest, who from his home in Mountain View has battled for "purity" of womanhood through a small document entitled, "Open Letter To Man."

"The media has degraded women by portraying them as sex objects rather than putting them in places of dignity and respect they deserve," said Father Caffrey, a Maryknoll priest for 50 years.

Written by songwriter Sy-Miller for his wife, former actress Jill Jackson, the letter has been distributed to more than 252 million people throughout the world and requests keep mounting.

A bespectacled, white-haired but energetic man, Father Caffrey came across the letter when a part-time typist in the Maryknoll Fathers' Los Angeles office gave it to him.

SOON he became immersed in circulating the document. But it wasn't until the president of a large industrial firm volunteered to print the letter free — but asked anonymity — that it spread to all corners of the globe.

"In films and books, women are portrayed as having only bodies and not souls," said Father Caffrey.

"Women hold the key to maintaining the family unit," he added. "Women of the nation go so goes the nation."

He has enlisted the aid of many influential political figures to help get the message of the letter across to people. His files contain a letter from Mrs. Pat Nixon commending his work.

Recently the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., wrote Father Caffrey asking him for 4,500 copies of the letter for its midshipmen. A few weeks later the Air Force Academy in Colorado called him and requested 4,000 copies.

Father Caffrey currently is on a campaign to distribute copies of the letter to all Catholic school superintendents throughout the United States.

"Some people think our youth have gone wild, but they haven't," he stressed. "It is essential that our youth learn the dignity and beauty of woman and thus help stem the tide of immorality."

The impact of the letter has been ecumenical. Radio broadcasters have read it on the air; television talk shows have discussed it; John Volpe, when governor of Massachusetts, had it circulated throughout his state; and various religious publications and bulletins have printed the letter.

Free copies of the letter are available by writing the Solo Cup Foundation, Caffrey at P.O. Box 4287, 1505 East Main St., Urbana, Ill., 61801, or Father Mountain View, Calif. 94040.

Spring Quarter begins April 16. Plan to enroll now. Or, make plans to enroll in fall quarter 1974. Veteran Approval is expected in July.

ACADEMIC INFORMATION

COURSE OF STUDY: Three years. Three 12 week quarters per year. Arrangements are being made for a fourth year of study leading to a Bachelor of Theology degree. Wednesday, Thursday, Friday — 9:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Class duration — 45 minutes. Normal academic load is 16 hours.

CHAPEL: Wednesday, Thursday, Friday — 9:00 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. There are also Chapel services for the Evening Division. Tuesday — 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. Prayer Meeting.

FIELD EXPERIENCE: A practical experience program is vital to the development of well-balanced ministers. Experience in all forms of evangelism and Christian service will be included in the M.I.O. (Ministers-in-Observation) and M.I.T. (Ministers-in-Training) program. All catechism and first and second year college students will be classified as M.I.O.s. Upon reaching the third year, students will be classified as M.I.T.s. A field experience director will ensure that all students have participated in the required activities in order to complete this program. The Pastor will have special teaching sessions relevant to M.I.O.-M.I.T. training.

CREDITS: 12 units per quarter, 36 per year for the full-time student. A certificate of completion will be given at the end of the school year. After the third year a diploma will be offered. Completion of the fourth year leads to a Bachelor of Theology degree.

EVENING DIVISION: A part-time evening division is offered. A four year night program will fulfill the requirements necessary for the three year diploma. The fourth year of instruction, leading to the granting of the Bachelor of Theology degree, will be offered only during the day. Night students will also be part of the M.I.O.-M.I.T. program. Friday night evangelism will be required.

COMMUNITY CHAPEL was dedicated on Sunday, August 4, 1963. Rev. Leonard Fox from San Bernardino brought the dedicatory message. Since 1963, God has led us step by step and we have experienced many movings of the Holy Spirit. Visions of the church and its growth have been seen by members of the congregation, many of which have already come to pass.

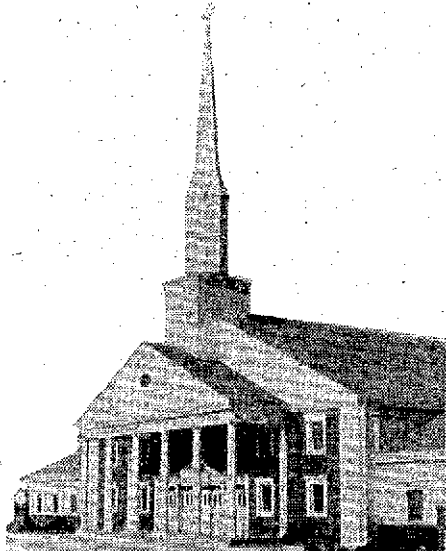

The church was built around personal evangelism, and current soul-winning activities include: hospitals, beaches, church-on-the street, parks, Watts; in fact everywhere our people go they win souls. We have a tremendous youth program centered around Royal Ranger and Missionette training. Young men and women in the assembly who have God's call upon their lives are enrolled as Ministers-In-Training.

One of our latest adventures for God was the founding, in 1971, of Community Bible College. Our first years were exciting, and it thrilled my heart to watch the spiritual growth of the students. As a Pastor, I feel that every Christian should be meaningfully involved in Bible study programs. Our goal at Community Chapel is to train men and women who will carry the Gospel to the ends of the earth, a task which must be finished before Jesus comes again.

Sincerely for souls,
Pastor Esther M. Mallett

Missionary to Singles; 'America Like Heaven'

By MARK CLUTTER
When a man is ordained it is rather difficult to predict where his vow will lead him. The Rev. Nicholas Christoff never intended to become the chaplain of upperclass apartments filled with affluent, pleasure-loving, unmarried people.

The young Lutheran pastor came to International Village 25 miles from Chicago because it seemed like a pleasant place for an unmarried man to live. Little by little he became the resident pastor. He also ministers to other such places. Altogether he has a "congregation" of nearly 3,000. He receives a salary from the mission board. The developer of the complexes provides his apartment and secretarial help.

What does a missionary do? Many of them are more pagan than Christian. They are enjoying success in their professions and they know how to make the most of their leisure.

Christoff does about what every clergyman does but in a casual style. There are weddings. People devoted to success and pleasure also have their hangups, so much of his ministry is counseling. Some of the singles want to form a church, but he opposes this idea. They should, he believes, identify themselves with the churches of the general community. But most churches are geared to family life. There are worship services but not on Sundays. Their life style calls for other activities on the Lord's Day.

Like most clergymen his conscience twinges now and then. He is afraid he could become too much engrossed in "the fun aspect" of his ministry.

"TYPOS" — typographical errors — are the bane of an editor's life. Usually they make him look like an idiot. Religion Editor Les Rodney had the rare experience of seeing his style improved by a typo. Of Palm Sunday he wrote ".... Palm Sunday, beginning the portentous week whose events lie at the core of Christianity." The typo changed "lie" to "live."

AMERICA IS "like heaven on earth," says Anna Chuning Hsiao, 81, who has come home from a 53-year mission in China.

Visiting in Pasadena, Mrs Hsiao said: People I have never known take care of me like I was their own mother. Everywhere I go people give me so much love.

"This is almost a heavenly place with all the lawns and flowers and pretty houses."

She refused to say anything "dishonorable" about China and placed emphasis on positive achievements in health, social order, housing, transportation.

She was permitted to leave China after the visit of Henry Kissinger, secretary of state.

JAILING of 442 Buddhist monks in Saigon on charges of civil disobedience has brought vigorous protests from Rev. Dr. W. Sterling Cary, president, and Dr. Claire Randall, secretary of the National Council of Churches.

Would welcome Mo. Synod members, says LCA head

In his April pastoral letter, Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America, shares some concerns resulting from difficulties within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

"I do not wish to offer advice to either side of the conflict" that has been going on between the Synod and members of the faculty of Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, Dr. Marshall states.

"Yet I find it necessary to anticipate the decisions which may be required in our church.

"Last September I wrote synodical presidents that we should not encourage pastors of LCMS to transfer into the LCA, but I had to note that those who fulfilled the requirements could be admitted. I wrote similarly about the admission of congregations. The LCA does not want to engage in proselytizing, but neither does it wish to give up its traditional hospitality for all Lutherans."

Marshall traces relations between the two churches which have engaged in many inter-Lutheran conversations and which are members of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. but do not have altar and pulpit fellowship. Nor is Missouri a member of the Lutheran World Federation.

The LCA, which does have altar and pulpit fellowship with the third major North American Lutheran body — the American Lutheran Church — has long maintained that acceptance of the Augsburg Confession and Luther's Small Catechism provides "sufficient understanding of the Gospel for unity."

The LCA president notes that the tension within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod between church government and theology has resulted in opposing views becoming "such a matter of conscience on both sides that insistence on agreement in more than the confessions has prevented unity."

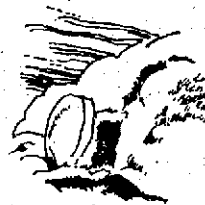

"The LCA gets involved in the debate when pastors or administrators meet in inter-Lutheran conferences, when theologians meet for joint study or when members of congregations inquire about news reports. The LCA cherishes the relationship it enjoys with representatives of LCMS in inter-Lutheran organization and wants co-operation to increase. At the same time, the confessional position in the LCA would be closer to the views of the St. Louis faculty than to the New Orleans convention resolutions."

Dr. Marshall expresses the opinion in his letter to LCA's leadership that "moderating decisions may ameliorate some of these problems."

He states "the formation of a new church is a possibility," and comments "on initial impulse opposes more church bodies because we had hoped the trend was toward fewer and eventually one."

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?
the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" — Ps. 27:1

Question: What does Easter mean to the Christian Scientist?

Answer: An awakened realization of the risen Christ, the divine light pointing the path away from human sorrow and strife to the glory of the resurrection.

Question: Does healing in Christian Science require great faith?

Answer: It does not rest on a blind faith in the unknown but on an enlightened understanding of God as infinite, divine Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, and Love. It recognizes God as acting through universal, immutable, spiritual law, an understanding of which constitutes the Science of Christianity.

Question: What is a Christian Science Reading Room?

Answer: It is a quiet place where anyone in the community may come to pray and to study the Bible and Christian Science literature. We have visitors of many faiths, and some who profess no religion at all.

PEALE ON EASTER Mystery of the world of spirit

By NORMAN VINCENT
PEALE

When the year comes round to Easter we tend to reflect upon the mystery of life after death and upon the world of spirit. I find myself thinking of an illustration by Stewart Edward White which points up the close relationship of this mortal world with life on the other side.

The illustration had to do with the electric fan. When stopped it is not possible to see through the blades of the fan. But when the fan is started and brought up to its highest revolution you can see through the fast whirling blades. This seems to illustrate that the difference between the physical world and that which we call the spirit world is one of frequency. At low frequency we cannot see or discern but in moments of a high frequency level of insight we experience awareness of the other side of life. Thus the conviction that death is not the end comes to some through mystical and psychic experiences.

Science has learned that nothing in nature can disappear and leave no trace. A particle of matter cannot be annihilated — only transformed. Dr. Werner von Braun asks if it doesn't make sense to assume that the same principle applies to the human soul, and he says, "Everything science has taught me... and continues to teach me strengthens my belief in the continuity of our spiritual existence after death."

A WEST COAST woman wrote to me on this subject and I quote from her letter, "At the birth of our sixth baby I had an experience of which I seldom speak, because some people regard anything of this nature 'way out.' I arrived in the delivery room at 8 p.m. The baby was born at 8:10. So all this took place in those ten minutes. My mind was clearer than in previous births as there was time for only a little whiff of gas. Then it happened. I had the feeling of being elevated just to the left of where I lay, into 'the place of life.' I had the strong feeling that I was only there to receive the baby's life. Never have I had such a joyous, elated experience. It wasn't a world I could explain — just a realm of utmost joy. I was conscious of that world and this one, too, at the same time, understanding that I would later have to forget what I saw and what made for such joy, because I would come back to this world and here we cannot yet have knowledge of what is over there.

"For hours afterward two familiar verses were in my mind, 'eye hath not seen nor ear heard... the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him'... and 'For now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face... I understood why I had to forget. What remained was the tremendous, indescribable joy. I realized too that just one tiny step over the threshold of death would again put me in that same glorious place. I felt God's presence all around me. I've had a God-given taste of life after death and nothing can ever take it from me."

A Canadian reader writes about his experience of a psychic nature: "Some years after my mother's death I was faced with a problem which if not solved correctly would ruin my life.

New Hope drama

The Matrons of New Hope Baptist Church, 1160 New York St., will again present the drama of the Crucifixion on Easter Sunday at 7:30 p.m., with the public invited, admission free.

One evening I was lying on my bed, greatly worried, when my mother appeared before me and said, 'Son, you are in trouble.' To this day I am not sure if I had fallen asleep and was dreaming or if I actually saw my mother standing there in the room with me. She told me what course to take. Then she was gone. I followed the advice and it led to the right solution. If this was a dream it was the most vivid one I ever had. In my opinion there is only a very thin veil between us and those who have passed on."

THERE CAN BE no better time for sharing experiences like these than at Easter when millions through our churches and with uplifted hearts hear the momentous narrative of the resurrection — how the Lord appeared several times and spoke to His disciples to remind them that He had not died but lived. The other world was showing through.

For many the most convincing testimony that death is not the end is found in the Bible. Since the spiritual teachings found there prove true in human experience on other subjects, why then we may reason should we doubt the assurance of life after death from the same spiritual source? After warning His disciples that His physical death was approaching, Jesus said comfortingly to them, "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you... that where I am, ye may be also."

Easter brings a two-fold promise: one that God's living presence here and now helps us meet life and grow in understanding — and the other promise is that we humans will live with Him, in the life hereafter.
